

Homeostatic PCGAL

Model of the control process involving a sensor, a controller, an actuator, and a feedback loop. The model is used to understand the control process in a system.

Model of a Negative Feedback Loop

Homeostatic systems maintain stability by using negative feedback loops. A negative feedback loop is a control system through which the system corrects a negative feedback loop, similar to the way that a thermostat maintains a constant temperature. In a negative feedback loop, the system's output is compared to a setpoint, and the difference is used to adjust the system's input, which then produces the output. This process continues until the system is back in balance.
