The Context of Medicines in Developing Countries Sjaak van der Geest, Susan Reynolds Whyte, 2012-12-06 Western pharmaceuticals are flooding the Third World Injections capsules and tablets are available in city markets and village shops from traditional practitioners and street vendors as well as from more orthodox sources like hospitals Although many are aware of this pharmaceutical invasion little has been written about how local people perceive and use these products This book is a first attempt to remedy that situation It presents studies of the ways Western medicines are circulated and understood in the cities and rural areas of Africa Asia and Latin America We feel that such a collection is long overdue for two reasons The first is a practical one people dealing with health problems in developing countries need information about local situations and they need examples of methods they can use to examine the particular contexts in which they are working We hope that this book will be useful for pharmacists doctors nurses health planners policy makers and concerned citizens who are interested in the realities of drug use Why do people want various kinds of medicine How do they evaluate and choose them and how do they obtain them The second reason for these studies of medicines is to fill a need in medical anthropology as a field of study Here we address our colleagues in anthropology medical sociology and related disciplines
