Bear, 2013-07-04 This volume unites spelling and word recognition two areas that have largely remained theoretically and empirically distinct Despite considerable advances in the investigation of processes underlying word perception and the acknowledgement of the seminal importance of lexical access in the reading and writing processes to date the development and functioning of orthographic knowledge across both encoding and decoding contexts has rarely been explored The book begins to fill this void by offering a coherent and unified articulation of the perceptual linguistic and cognitive features that characterize an individual s advancing word orthographic knowledge providing evidence for a common knowledge base underlying spelling in writing and word recognition in reading From a developmental perspective the studies and syntheses presented in this volume blend insights from psychology and language study with those from clinical and classroom observations These insights help explain how individuals from preschool through adolescence develop knowledge of the orthographic system underlying word structure in English and how they apply this knowledge in actual writing and reading contexts Implications are drawn for the assessment and teaching of spelling vocabulary and word analysis from primary through middle grades Reading Course United States. Office of Education, 1927 The Psychology of Reading Mildred C. Robeck, Randall R. Wallace, 2017-11-06 The need to know why as well as how children and youth respond as they do to reading instruction has guided the selection of this book s content The second edition of this title originally published in 1990 has retained and elaborated upon the three major themes previously presented that reading is a linguistic process that motivation the affective domain may be as important in learning to read as the cognitive domain and that the reality of learning theory is to be found in the mechanisms of the brain where information is mediated and memory traces are stored The text integrates views from cognitive psychology psycholinguistics and neuropsychology as they relate to reading and writing A learning motivation model is provided to present associative learning conceptualization and self directed reading in a hierarchical relationship with distinct cognitive and affective components The distinction between beginning and proficient reading is maintained throughout the text Bulletin United States.
