Read the Story Carefully Around Stoves and Candles

One cold evening, Mia's mom was baking cookies in the kitchen. The sweet smell made Mia want to help. She reached for a spoon near the stove, but her mom stopped her. "Mia, the stove is hot," her mom said. "You could burn yourself!" Mia nodded and stepped back. Her mom continued, "Always ask an adult for help when cooking, and never touch the stove without permission."

Later, Mia saw her dad light a candle in the living room. The tiny flame flickered brightly. Curious, Mia leaned closer, but her dad quickly said, "Stay back, Mia. Candles are not toys. If you get too close, your hair or clothes could catch fire. Always stay a safe distance away."

That night, Mia helped remind her little brother, Jake, to stay safe. When Jake tried to touch a pot on the stove, Mia warned him, "Be careful! The stove is hot, and it's dangerous to touch."

Mia and Jake learned two important rules. Always ask an adult for help when cooking, and stay away from flames like stoves and candles. By following these rules, the whole family worked together to stay safe around hot stuff.
