Advancing Pluralism in Teaching Economics Samuel Decker, Wolfram Elsner, Svenja Flechtner, 2018-09-03 The complex economic problems of the 21st century require a pluralist real world oriented and innovative discipline of economics that is capable of addressing and teaching these issues to students This volume is a state of the art compilation of diverse innovative and international perspectives on the rationales for and pathways towards pluralist economics teaching It fosters constructive controversy aiming to incite authors and commentators to engage in fruitful debates This volume addresses a number of key questions Why is it important for a social science to engage in pluralistic teaching What issues does pluralist teaching face in different national contexts Which traditions and practices in economic teaching make pluralist teaching difficult What makes economics as a canonical textbook science particular and how could the rigid textbook system be innovated in a meaningful way What can we learn from school education and other social science disciplines Through examining these issues the editors have created a pluralist but cohesive book on teaching economics in the contemporary classroom drawing from ideas and examples from around the world Advancing Pluralism in Teaching Economics offers a valuable insight into the methodology and application of pluralist economics teaching It will be a great resource for those teaching economics at various levels as well as researchers

The Market in Mind Mark Dennis Robinson, 2019-07-23 A critical examination of translational medicine when private risk is transferred to the public sector and university research teams become tech startups for global investors A global shift has secretly transformed science and medicine Starting in 2003 biomedical research in the West has been reshaped by the emergence of translational science and medicine the idea that the aim of research is to translate findings as quickly as possible into medical products In The Market in Mind Mark Dennis Robinson charts this shift arguing that the new research paradigm has turned university research teams into small biotechnology startups and their industry partners into early stage investment firms There is also a larger surprising consequence from this shift according to Robinson translational science and medicine enable biopharmaceutical firms as part of a broader financial strategy to outsource the riskiest parts of research to nonprofit universities Robinson examines the implications of this new configuration What happens for example when universities absorb unknown levels of risk Robinson argues that in the years since the global financial crisis translational science and medicine has brought about the financialization of health Robinson explores such topics as shareholder anxiety and industry retreat from Alzheimer's and depression research how laboratory research is understood as health innovation even when there is no product the emergence of investor networking events as crucial for viewing science in a market context and the place of patients in research decisions Although translational medicine justifies itself by the goal of relieving patients suffering Robinson finds patients voices largely marginalized in translational neuroscience

Moments of Valuation Ariane Berthoin Antal, Michael Hutter, David Stark, 2015 The outcome of innovation processes are determined by complex historically grown valuation practices In this book a wide range of innovations are taken into consideration from small inventions like entertainment novelties to large societal changes through new technologies The chapters observe the particular local or distributed sites in which their episodes of innovation take place and they identify the initial dissonance among those judging a newly proposed alternative. The emphasis of the inquiry, however, is on the practices of valuation that are at work when something succeeds in being new. The authors represent a wide variety of sub disciplines and national backgrounds in the social sciences. They share an interest in social valuation and a pragmatist approach. The differences between their empirical evidence reflect the wide variety of appearances that valuation takes in contemporary society. They are anthropologists, economic or cultural sociologists, organization researchers, historians or political scientists. A number of chapters deals with aesthetic valuation as in the tasting of a new vintage or in the socio technical process that shaped successful synthesizer sounds. Other chapters discuss the judgment processes in organizations like architect offices or consultancy firms and processes of evaluation and valorization in larger fields of practice like accounting or mathematics. The studies are both of interest in their various professional fields and contribute to a more general understanding of the social and cultural conditions under which innovations fail and succeed.
