These results are very encouraging, and they are consistent with the findings of other studies. For example, a study by the National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER) found that the average return on investment in education is about 10% per year. This is a very high return, especially when compared to the return on investment in other assets, such as stocks and bonds. The NBER study also found that the return on investment in education is higher for those who have a college degree than for those who do not. This suggests that the benefits of education are not only high, but they also increase with the level of education. The results of the current study are consistent with these findings, and they provide further evidence that the benefits of education are high and that they increase with the level of education.
