Serve and Protect Tobias Winright, 2020-11-13 This collection of essays on policing and the use of force while written over the course of the last twenty five years remains relevant and timely Although issues in policing and questions about excessive force and brutality have been addressed by criminologists sociologists philosophers and criminal justice ethicists only a handful of theological ethicists treat this pressing matter While the Christian moral tradition has a voluminous record of theological attention to violence and nonviolence war and peace there is a dearth of references to policing And most considerations of criminal justice issues by Christians and their churches concentrate on prison reform or abolition and the death penalty but not policing These essays authored by a theological ethicist possessing professional experience in law enforcement seek to fill this curious gap They offer a framework for moral reasoning concerning the justification for police use of force and the just application of such force and they propose just policing as a model that is consonant with promoting a just peace in communities and society In addition they explore the implications of such an approach for wider international questions about just war terrorism the responsibility to protect and post war justice

Legal Phantoms Susan Bibler Coutin, Jennifer M. Chacón, Stephen Lee, 2024-01-30 The 2012 Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals DACA program was supposed to be a stepping stone a policy innovation announced by the White House designed to put pressure on Congress for a broader lasting set of legislative changes Those changes never materialized and the people who hoped to benefit from them have been forced to navigate a tense and contradictory policy landscape ever since haunted by these unfulfilled promises Legal Phantoms tells their story After Congress failed to pass a comprehensive immigration bill in 2013 President Obama pivoted in 2014 to supplementing DACA with a deferred action program known as DAPA for the parents of citizens and lawful permanent residents and a DACA expansion DACA in 2014 But challenges from Republican led states prevented even these programs from going into effect Interviews with would be applicants immigrant rights advocates and government officials reveal how such failed immigration reform efforts continue to affect not only those who had hoped to benefit but their families communities and the country in which they have made an uneasy home Out of the ashes of these lost dreams though people find their own paths forward through uncharted legal territory with creativity and resistance
