
Lost at Sea

Situation

You are adrift on a private yacht in the South Pacific. As a consequence of a fire of unknown origin, much of the yacht and its contents have been destroyed. The yacht is now slowly sinking. Your location is unclear because of the destruction of critical navigational equipment and because you and the crew were distracted trying to bring the fire under control. Your best estimate is that you are approximately one thousand miles south-southwest of the nearest land.

Below is a list of fifteen items that are intact and undamaged after the fire. In addition to these articles, you have a serviceable, rubber life raft with oars large enough to carry yourself, the crew, and all the items listed below. The total contents of all survivors' pockets are a package of cigarettes, several books of matches, and five one-dollar bills.

Your task is to rank the fifteen items below in terms of their importance to your survival. Place the number 1 by the most important item, the number 2 by the second most important, and so on through number 15, the least important. You will do this twice: once alone (10 min.) and once as a group (20 min.).

Radionuclides in the Environment David A. Atwood, 2013-02-19 Nuclear energy is the one energy source that could meet the world's growing energy needs and provide a smooth transition from fossil fuels to renewable energy in the coming decades and centuries It is becoming abundantly clear that an increase in nuclear energy capacity will and probably must take place However nuclear energy and the use of radionuclides for civilian and military purposes lead to extremely long lived waste that is costly and highly problematic to deal with Therefore it is critically important to understand the environmental implications of radionuclides for ecosystems and human health if nuclear energy is to be used to avoid the impending global energy crisis The present volume of the EIC Books series addresses this critical need by providing fundamental information on environmentally significant radionuclides The content of this book was developed in collaboration with many of the authors of the chapters Given the enormity of the subject the Editor and the Authors had to be judicious in selecting the chapters that would appropriately encompass and describe the primary topics particularly those that are of importance to the health of ecosystems and humans The resulting chapters were chosen to provide this information in a book of useful and appropriate length Each chapter provides fundamental information on the chemistry of the radionuclides their occurrence and movement in the environment separation and analyses and the technologies needed for their remediation and mitigation The chapters are structured with a common systematic format in order to facilitate comparisons between elements and groups of elements
