Komvopoulos,2001-08-29 Long Term Durability of Structural Materials features proceedings of the workshop held at Berkeley CA in October 2000 It brought together engineers and scientists who have received grants from the initiative NSF 98 42 to share their results on the study of long term durability of materials and structures The major objective was to develop new methods for accelerated short term laboratory or in situ tests which allow accurate reliable predictions of the long term performance of materials machines and structures To achieve this goal it was important to understand the fundamental nature of the deterioration and damage processes in materials and to develop innovative ways to model the behavior of these processes as they affect the life and long term performance of components machines and structures The researchers discussed their approach to include size effects in scaling up from laboratory specimens to actual structures Accelerated testing and durability modeling techniques developed were validated by comparing their results with performance under actual operating conditions The main mechanism of the deterioration discussed included environmental effects and or exposure to loads speeds and other operating conditions that are not fully anticipated in the original design A broad range of deterioration damage such as fatigue overload ultraviolet damage corrosion and wear was presented A broad range of materials of interest was also discussed including the full spectrum of construction materials metals ceramics polymers composites and coatings Emphasis was placed on scale dependence and history of fabrication on resulting mechanical behavior of materials

Diversity and Eco-Physiological Responses of Aquatic Plants Chunhua Liu, Sidinei Magela Thomaz, ZhongQiang Li, Te CAO, Katya E. Kovalenko, 2020-06-16 Aquatic plants refer to a diverse group of aquatic photosynthetic organisms large enough to be seen with the naked eye and the vegetative parts of which actively grow either permanently or periodically for at least several weeks each year submerged below floating on or growing up through the water surface These include aquatic vascular plants aquatic mosses and some larger algae Aquatic plants are grouped into life forms each of which relates differently to limiting factors and has distinct ecological functions in aquatic ecosystems Life form groups include emergent macrophytes plants that are rooted in sediment or soils that are periodically inundated with all other structures extending into the air floating leaved macrophytes rooted plants with leaves that float on the water surface submersed macrophytes rooted plants growing completely submerged free submerged macrophytes which are not rooted but attached to other macrophytes or submerged structures and free floating macrophytes plants that float on the water surface Aquatic plants play an important role in the structure and function of aquatic ecosystems by altering water movement regimes providing shelter and refuge and serving as a food source In addition aquatic plants produce large standing crops which can also stabilize sediments accumulate large amounts of nutrients thus improving water healthy Thus because of their ecological role aquatic plants are an important component of aquatic ecosystems Aquatic plants are very vulnerable to human activities and global changes and many species of the plants had become endangered in the past several decades due to habitat loss flooding damming over foraging biological invasion and eutrophication which might not be halted but enforced in the future when more extreme weathers coincide with enhanced human activities
