¹ To address the issue, the authors first tested the model with the same dependent variable as in the previous study, the number of employees. The results were similar to those reported in the previous study.

As more research on the effects of various types of training on the brain is conducted, it will become clear that the benefits of training are not limited to the specific tasks that are practiced. The benefits of training are likely to be more general, affecting a wide range of cognitive and motor skills.
