Land Reform in Small Island Developing States Karl John, 2006-02 In recent times the spotlight of international media attention has often focused on problems which have their roots in the inequitable distribution of agricultural land still a characteristic of many developing countries For example media coverage of the social unrest that has beset Zimbabwe since the closing years of the twentieth century has been relentless Large plantations still exist in the Caribbean a legacy of the erstwhile economic importance of sugar to the region However on several islands the traditionally highly skewed pattern of land distribution has been successfully reformed in most cases without recourse to violence and confiscation in a revolutionary context In St Vincent the demise of the plantation and the emergence of an independent peasantry are attributable to a significant degree to public policy formulated and implemented over a period of one hundred years Karl John's study chronicles the historical course of these official interventions aimed at reforming the land tenure structure in this small island developing state The work pays particular attention to the motives for the policies and strategies adopted for land reform critically evaluates the planning and implementation of related programs and projects and assesses the role of prevailing economic social and political forces in both limiting and enabling their success The Economy as a System of Power Warren Samuels,2017-09-29 This collection brings together important materials concerning the study of the economy as a system of power offering a sample of positions taken by contributors to the Journal of Economic Issues in response to the perceived problems of the social control of corporate power Trade and Structural Change in Pacific Asia Colin I. Clements, The paper explores the central assumptions of the Neo Classical Structuralist and Marxist theories of development in order to determine how these theories create real political parameters The conclusion is that radical diagnoses of development underdevelopment dominate academic thinking but conservative theories dominate policy formation Given a choice between a flexible exchange rate policy and a national liberation struggle policy makers in the Third World will opt for flexible exchange rates while justifying their actions in terms of more radical rhetoric The CIA in Guatemala Richard H.
