

Imagine that you are the assessing nurse in the A&E department.

You are assessing each of the following types of patient and can change their position in the queue according to the results of your assessment.

You have five options for each type of patient (see Options below)

- Children
- Illnesses that could be seen by the patient's GP e.g. sore throats
- Elderly people
- Life threatening conditions e.g. heart attack, fitting, uncontrolled bleeding
- Very painful conditions (that can't be controlled by tablets) e.g. elderly lady fallen and hurt hip
- Patients with conditions that could get worse if not treated within an hour e.g. fracture/dislocation
- Patients who are creating a disturbance or making a fuss
- Sports related injuries
- Patients who have been injured at work
- Smoking related illnesses
- Drug abuse related injuries
- Injuries that were sustained more than a day ago
- Bleeding (that is not life threatening) e.g. small cut to leg
- Patients who are under police arrest
- Patients who are drunk

Are there any other groups of patients you can think of that you might want to move up or down the queue?

Options

- LEAVE them where they are in the queue to be seen in time order.
- Move them right to the TOP of the queue to be seen immediately
 - even if that means staff have to stop treating other patients at that time.
- Move them right to the BOTTOM of the queue to be seen after everyone else
 - even if that means they never actually get to be seen.
- Move them UP the queue, taking into consideration who else is waiting.
- Move them DOWN the queue, taking into consideration who else is waiting.
