

READ THE PASSAGE

As you read, think about the author's reasons for writing the passage.

Abigail Adams, America's Founding Mother

Though people often speak of America's many Founding Fathers, such as Thomas Jefferson, George Washington, and Benjamin Franklin, there is only one woman who deserves the title of Founding Mother. Abigail Adams, the wife of President John Adams, was more than just a First Lady. She was a powerful woman who has earned an important place in American history.

Adams held strong views about the equality of the sexes, believing that women should be given the same educational opportunities as men. She also believed in racial equality and thought slavery was evil. Adams shared her then-controversial views on these topics with the press and in letters to many powerful people, but her most famous writing is contained in the personal correspondence she kept with her husband. These letters, published after her death, showcase her remarkable mind and spirit.

Adams wrote her most famous letter regarding women's rights in 1776, when her husband was working hard at the Second Continental Congress to convince other leaders to declare independence from England. Arguing that men should not have too much power over women in the new system of government, Adams wrote: "I long to hear that you have declared an independency. And, by the way, in the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors. Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could." We would all do well to remember this extraordinary lady, the Founding Mother of equal liberty for all.
