Hate Crime in Cyberspace Audrey Guinchard, 2015 Hate crime evokes hate speech but to assimilate one with the other would not do justice to the diversity of behaviors encompassed by the expression "hate crime" A first overview of the notion is necessary in order to highlight the key features of offenses involving hatred A particular emphasis will be given to the specificity of cyberspace hate crimes both in the UK and in France This comparison will enable us to tackle the main issue cyber hate raises that of the legitimacy and practicality of criminalizing behaviors related to hatred on the internet The debates may not be specific to hate crimes but they are acute for at an international level crime notably limits a freedom of expression which does not have the same meaning both legally and culturally The Convention on cyber crime will also be looked at especially that its critics argue that it did not go far enough into protecting victims of hate crimes at an international level positive interaction they have also allowed users to verbally attack and bully each other with no fear of repercussion. Moreover, online predators will often use these tools to harass, stalk, and in some cases even lure their victims. The Research Anthology on Combating Cyber Aggression and Online Negativity discusses the research behind cyber aggression and cyber bullying, as well as methods to predict and prevent online negativity. It presents policy, technological, and human intervention practices against cyber aggression. Covering topics such as media literacy, demographic variables, and workplace cyberbullying, this major reference work is a critical resource for students and educators of higher education, libraries, social media administrators, government organizations, K-12 teachers, computer scientists, sociologists, psychologists, human resource managers, researchers, and academicians.

The Globalization of Hate
Jennifer Scheppe, Mark Austin Walters, 2016-05-26

The Globalisation of Hate: Internationalising Hate Crime is the first book to examine the impact of globalisation on our understanding of hate speech and hate crime. Bringing together internationally acclaimed scholars with researchers, policy makers, and practitioners from across the world, it critically scrutinises the concept of hate crime as a global phenomenon, seeking to examine whether hate crime can or should be conceptualised within an international framework and if so, how this might be achieved. Beginning with the global dynamics of hate, the contributions analyse whether hate crime can be defined globally, whether universal principles can be applied to the phenomenon, how hatred is spread, and how it impacts upon our global society. The middle portion of the book moves beyond the broader questions of globalisation to jurisdictional examples of how globalisation impacts upon our understanding of, and also our responses to, hate crime. The chapters explore in greater detail what is happening around the world and how the international concepts of hate crime are being operationalised locally, drawing out the themes of globalisation and internationalisation that are relevant to hate crime as evidenced by a number of jurisdictions from Europe, the US, Asia, and Africa. The final part of the book concludes with an examination of the different ways in which hate speech and hate crime is being combatted globally. International law, internet regulation, and the use of restorative practices are evaluated as methods of addressing hate-based conflict, with the discussions drawn from existing frameworks as well as exploring normative standards for future international efforts. Taken together, these innovative and insightful contributions offer a timely investigation into the effects of hate crime, offering an interdisciplinary approach to tackling what is now a global issue. It will be of interest to scholars and students of criminology, sociology, and criminal justice, as well as criminal justice practitioners, police officers, and policy makers.
