These data indicate that the 1990s have been a period of rapid change in the U.S. economy. The economy has grown rapidly, and the labor market has become more competitive. The economy has grown rapidly, and the labor market has become more competitive. The economy has grown rapidly, and the labor market has become more competitive.

For the purpose of this study, the following question was asked: how many children in the sample showed a trend in performance in mathematics that could be interpreted as a change in performance in mathematics? A trend was defined as the first performance point being in the low performance range, the second point being in the high performance range, and the third point being in the low performance range again, or the first performance point being in the high performance range, the second point being in the low performance range, and the third point being in the high performance range again.
