

Taking relationships to new heights

Technology infrastructure

When Boeing first commercially developed engines for new flight in 1988, it was still a relatively small company. The 787 Dreamliner, however, was a massive undertaking. It required a global network of suppliers, many of whom were not even in existence when the project began. To ensure the success of the program, Boeing had to build a new infrastructure from the ground up. This included creating a new supply chain, developing new manufacturing techniques, and investing in new technologies. The result was a more efficient and cost-effective production process, which allowed Boeing to bring the 787 Dreamliner to market ahead of schedule.

Boeing's success in developing the 787 Dreamliner was a testament to the power of technology and innovation. By investing in new technologies and building a strong infrastructure, Boeing was able to overcome the challenges of a new market and bring a revolutionary aircraft to the world.
