insects must establish close associations with their host plants in order to modulate plant cellular processes to promote feeding and reproduction. In response to herbivore attacks, plants have developed a complex immune system such as plant signaling, plant resistant genes, and plant secondary metabolites. A sophisticated molecular arms race between plants and insects involves the interaction between different molecules from plants and insects. The secondary metabolite and resistant genes of plants can be used as defense tools against the infestation of insects. In contrast, the various types of detoxification enzymes and effectors from insects can interfere with plant defense at multiple levels for better adaptation. These metabolite substances and resistant genes of plants and detoxification enzymes and effectors of insects are involved in complex networks of genetic, physical, metabolic, and molecular interactions between plants and insects. And these molecules and genes can be identified by the new omics technologies including genome, transcriptome, proteome, metabolomics, and so on. Omics analyses have provided new insights and understanding into the relationships between plants and insects as well as the underlying molecular mechanisms of their interactions. Understanding the molecular interaction between plants and insects can help develop new and improved plant resistant varieties and novel green control strategies. The Chautauquan, 1898

Egyptian Deportations of the Late Bronze Age Christian Langer, 2021-09-20. Egyptian Deportations of the Late Bronze Age explores the political economy of deportations in New Kingdom Egypt ca. 1550–1070 BCE from an interdisciplinary angle. The analysis of ancient Egyptian primary source material and the international correspondence of the time draws a comprehensive picture of the complex and far-reaching policies. The dataset reveals their geographic scope, economic and demographic impact in Egypt and abroad, as well as their interconnection with territorial expansion, international relations, and labour management. The supply chain, profiting institutions, and individuals in Egypt, as well as the labour tasks, origins, and the composition of the deportees, are discussed in detail. A comparative analytical framework integrates the Egyptian policies with a review of deportation discourses, as well as historical premodern and modern cases, and enables a global and diachronic understanding of the topic. The study is thus the first systematic investigation of deportations in ancient Egyptian history and offers new insights into Egyptian governance that revise previous assessments of the role of forced migration and unfree labour in ancient Egyptian society and their long-term effects.
