Grade 1

I Have Roles!

I have roles. They change and grow.
I can do more based on what I know.
My role is a student when I'm at school.
When I go home I'm a parent.

The Role of Intergovernmental Fiscal Transfers in Improving Education Outcomes Samer Al-Samarrai, The World Bank, Blane Lewis, 2021-07-23 The majority of the world's children live in countries where local governments are responsible for the provision of basic education services Although subnational governments manage their own education systems they often rely on transfers from the central government for funding The main purpose of this study is to assess how these fiscal transfers affect public funding for education and how they ultimately affect student schooling and learning outcomes Through a careful analysis of how fiscal transfers have affected education systems in different contexts the investigation develops a set of principles to support improvements in the design and implementation of transfer systems with a specific focus on the provision of education services The study is centered on seven country case studies that aim to answer a set of common research questions using a similar approach Country case studies were conducted in Brazil Bulgaria China Colombia Indonesia Sudan and Uganda The analysis shows that fiscal transfer mechanisms can improve the adequacy of public education spending reduce spending inequalities between regions and improve spending efficiency Moreover the study highlights that carefully designed and implemented transfer systems can help raise overall education outcomes and reduce education inequality This publication was funded by a grant from the Results in Education for All Children REACH trust fund at the World Bank REACH is supported by the government of Germany through the Federal Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development the government of Norway through NORAD and the government of the United States of America through the U S Agency for International Development

on Communications,2007-08-03 The Chairman of the BBC is an important position but the recent appointment was not subject to parliamentary oversight and has neither been debated in Parliament nor considered by any Select Committee As the new Royal Charter has also considerably altered the responsibilities of the job the Committee carried out a short inquiry on the subject The aim was twofold to make sure that the selection process was protected from political interference and had the confidence of the licence fee payer and to clarify how role had been affected by the new governance arrangements They recommend that in future a selection panel of at least five members of whom the majority should be non political should appoint the Chairman and that the appointments should be vetted by Parliament The Committee also recommend that there should be greater clarity about the role of the Chairman It should be clear whose job it is to represent the BBC itself and what it means to represent the licence fee payer and why the Chairman of the BBC is only an honorary title Research in Education ,1974 Hands-On Social Studies for Ontario, Grade 5 Jennifer E.
