Processing Barry E. Stein, 2012-06-01 The major reference work for a rapidly advancing field synthesizes central themes reports on current findings and offers a blueprint for future research Scientists attempts to understand the physiology underlying our apprehension of the physical world was long dominated by a focus on the individual senses The 1980s saw the beginning of systematic efforts to examine interactions among different sensory modalities at the level of the single neuron And by the end of the 1990s a recognizable and multidisciplinary field of multisensory processes had emerged More recently studies involving both human and nonhuman subjects have focused on relationships among multisensory neuronal ensembles and their behavioral perceptual and cognitive correlates The New Handbook of Multisensory Processing synthesizes the central themes in this rapidly developing area reports on current findings and offers a blueprint for future research The contributions all of them written for this volume by leading experts reflect the evolution and current state of the field This handbook does more than simply review the field Each of the volume s eleven sections broadly surveys a major topic and each begins with a substantive and thought provoking commentary by the section editor that identifies the major issues being explored describes their treatment in the chapters that follow and sets these findings within the context of the existing body of knowledge Together the commentaries and chapters provide an invaluable guide to areas of general agreement unresolved issues and topics that remain to be explored in this fast moving field The Handbook of Multisensory

Processes Gemma Calvert, Charles Spence, Barry E. Stein, 2004 Research is suggesting that rather than our senses being independent perception is fundamentally a multisensory experience This handbook reviews the evidence and explores the theory of broad underlying principles that govern sensory interactions regardless of the specific senses involved Visual Speech Recognition: Lip Segmentation and Mapping Liew, Alan Wee-Chung, Wang, Shilin, 2009-01-31 This book introduces the readers to the various aspects of visual speech recognitions including lip segmentation from video sequence lip feature extraction and modeling feature fusion and classifier design for visual speech recognition and speaker verification fundamental need to understand how we experience the physical world as it is to understand how we become who we are based on those very experiences The senses function as both portal and teacher and their individual and collective properties have fascinated scientists and philosophers for millennia In this context the attention directed toward specifying their properties on a sense by sense basis that dominated sensory research in the 20th century seems a prelude to our current preoccupation with how they function in concert Nevertheless it was the concentrated effort on the operational principles of visual senses that provided the depth of understanding necessary to inform current efforts to reveal how they act cooperatively We know that the information provided by any individual sensory modality is not always veridical but is subject to a myriad of modality specific distortions Thus the brain's ability to compare across the senses and to integrate the information they provide is not only a way to examine the accuracy of any individual sensory channel but also a way to enhance the collective information they make available to the brain
