 This volume focuses on the transferral of a televised format from the country in which it was originally produced into a wholly different cultural and linguistic ambit It specifically examines the British police procedural The Bill which became La Squadra when the format was licensed to be aired on Italian screens Focusing on one specific institutional field that of the formal police interview the book explores the characteristic features and constituent parts of such institutional speech events namely the differential distribution of knowledge and rights to knowledge the asymmetrical and adversarial strategies employed by the dyadic pair made up of interviewer and interviewee the sequential and interactional features of answers the legislative framework which governs investigative interviewing in the two countries in which the format was aired and the place of the interview room scenes in the overall narrative structure of the televised episodes What emerges from the study is not only an interesting comparison between two languages cultures and institutions findings also point to a different perception of reality and authenticity in the two formats being investigated As such the book will be of interest to students and scholars of linguistics and media studies The cross linguistic and cross cultural analyses presented here serve to illustrate that the global phenomenon of international format transferral is becoming increasingly local rooted in the culture language and worldview of the country of arrival     Interactional Linguistics Elizabeth Couper-Kuhlen, Margret Selting, 2018
 Reviewing recent findings on linguistic practices used in turn construction and turn taking repair action formation and ascription sequence and topic organization the book examines the way linguistic units of varying size sentences clauses phrases clause combinations particles are mobilized for the implementation of specific actions in talk in interaction A final chapter discusses the implications of an interactional perspective for our understanding of language as well as its variation diversity and universality Supplementary online chapters explore additional topics such as the linguistic organization of preference stance footing and storytelling as well as the use of prosody and phonetics and further practices with language
Conversation Analysis Gene H. Lerner, 2004-01-01 This collection assembles early yet previously unpublished research into the practices that organize conversational interaction by many of the central figures in the development and advancement of Conversation Analysis as a discipline Using the methods of sequential analysis as first developed by Harvey Sacks the authors produce detailed empirical accounts of talk in interaction that make fundamental contributions to our understanding of turntaking action formation and sequence organization One distinguishing feature of this collection is that each of the contributors worked directly with Sacks as a collaborator or was trained by him at the University of California or both Taken together this collection gives readers a taste of CA inquiry in its early years while nevertheless presenting research of contemporary significance by internationally known conversation analysts     Communication Yearbook 13

Consequentiality of Communication Stuart J. Sigman, 2013-11-05 In a bold attempt to redirect the ways theories of communication are conceived and research on communication processes are conducted this volume questions prevailing communication scholarship that emphasizes the cultural psychological and sociological variables that impact on and or are impacted by communication Instead of focusing on the consequences of communication this book urges readers to examine the consequentiality of communication what it is about the communication process that enables it to play a defining role in our lives Communication is not a neutral conveyor of meanings derived from culture cognition or social structure and is not explained by correlations with external variables Meaning emerges from the communication process itself it is dependent upon what transpires during the real time moments of communicators behaving with each other To properly study this new paradigm a new vocabulary for thinking about the consequentiality of communication is needed and proposed Four theoretical orientations are used to stake out this new territory coordinated management of meaning neo rhetorical theory conversation analysis and social communication theory While there are points of agreement and overlap on the need to study communication as inherently consequential there are also differences across the four theories in the value of rules as an explanatory concept on the relationship between structure and process and on the very constitution of a theory Thus this book has the benefit of articulating a new paradigm for communication scholarship without losing sight of the discipline's rich diversity The A-Z of Social Research Robert Lee Miller, John D Brewer, 2003-03-21 A detailed and valuable addition to

Positioning in Media Dialogue Elda Weizman, 2008 This book proposes a socio pragmatic exploration of the discursive practices used to construe and dynamically negotiate positions in news interviews It starts with a discursive interpretation of positioning role and challenge puts forward the relevance of a distinction between social and interactional roles demonstrates how challenges bring to the fore the relevant roles and role components of the participants and shows that in news interviews speakers constantly position and re position themselves and each other through discourse The discussion draws on an empirical fine grained analysis of a 24 hour corpus of news interviews on Israeli television and a corpus of media references The author postulates a discrepancy between interlocutors normative expectations which presuppose an asymmetrical division of labor on the one hand and real life practice which exhibits partial symmetry in speakers selection of discourse patterns as well as reciprocity in the use of challenge strategies on the other

Special attention is given to irony and terms of address which are shown to act as the center points of satellite challenge strategies geared as an ensemble toward the co construction of reciprocal positioning The analysis of three case studies further sheds light on the negotiations of intertwined positionings in context      The Social Psychology of Politics Victor C.
