The Power of Implicit Theories for Learning in Different Educational Contexts Yves Karlen,Silke Hertel,2021-12-20

Optimising the Third Space in Higher Education Natalia Veles,2022-11-18 Drawing on an empirical study of the cross boundary cross campus and intercultural collaborations between professional and academic staff at both an Australian and a Singaporean university this book demonstrates the potential of third space collaboration in higher education Through a multi case study methodology the author draws on the antecedent resources of spatial theory to investigate how staff working together crossing and transcending various traditional and imaginary boundaries created innovative boundary practices while successfully completing the university projects The third space projects under investigation range from increasing the academic research visibility and commercialisation of a research solution to expanding the educational choices for students in one geographical region and developing a research culture in one international campus The findings present practical approaches to strengthening collegiality and professional partnering challenging the reader to reflect on potential strategies that will apply to their own work environments This book will be a useful resource for researchers in higher education particularly those interested in the third space theory and practice university collaboration collaborative capital and impacts of diversification of university staff roles and identities

The Open Challenges of Cognitive Frailty: Risk Factors, Neuropsychological Profiles and Psychometric Assessment for Healthy Aging

Simone Varrasi, Sabrina Castellano, Daniele

Magistro, 2025-09-26 Frailty is a multidimensional geriatric syndrome characterized by increased vulnerability to stressors When physical frailty is associated with Mild Cognitive Impairment MCI but not dementia the definition of cognitive frailty is preferred The use of the term cognitive frailty is based on a long series of research on the association between multimorbidity and MCI allowing for a single definition to encompass the coexistence of physical and cognitive impairment This gives useful insights on the holistic processes of aging Several aspects of cognitive frailty remain unexplored particularly in comparison to physical frailty with no consensus on its prevention functioning and measurement The lack of agreement hinders the development of effective support strategies For instance a variety of studies investigated the modifiable health and psychosocial risk factors leading to the transition to cognitive frailty nutrition sleep depression social contacts sensory impairments risky habits and so on Results are still mixed Even the neuropsychological functioning has not been thoroughly described and the definition of cognitive profiles of frailty has been left to screening tests only The need for more specific distinctive cognitive markers is closely related to the necessity for dedicated diagnostic tools However these tools are not available due to the lack of a consensus on the multidimensional concept of frailty itself which encompasses sociodemographic physical cognitive psychological nutritional social aging and disease domains Each of them should be considered in effective community dwelling based psychometric tools The ambitious goal for up to date research therefore is to address all these gaps for healthy aging
