

Fallingwater

Frank Lloyd Wright, 1935-1937

Fort Pitt, Pennsylvania, USA, 1935-37

Frank Lloyd Wright designed Fallingwater as the most daring domestic residence in American architectural history. He began the project in 1935, at a time when the architectural establishment was still largely dominated by the traditional styles of the early 20th century. Wright's design was a radical departure from the norm, as it integrated the house with the natural environment of the site. The house was built on a series of concrete piers that allowed it to span the waterfall, creating a unique living space that was both modern and harmonious with nature.

skyscraper Chicago also cultivated a more humble but no less consequential form of modernism the private residence

Modern in the Middle Chicago Houses 1929-75 explores the substantial yet overlooked role that Chicago and its suburbs played in the development of the modern single family house in the twentieth century In a city often associated with the outsize reputations of Frank Lloyd Wright and Ludwig Mies van der Rohe the examples discussed in this generously illustrated book expand and enrich the story of the region's built environment Authors Susan Benjamin and Michelangelo Sabatino survey dozens of influential houses by architects whose contributions are ripe for reappraisal such as Paul Schweikher Harry Weese Keck Keck and William Pereira From the bold early example of the Battledock House by Henry Dubin 1930 to John Vinci and Lawrence Kenny's gem the Freeark House 1975 the generation spanning residences discussed here reveal how these architects contended with climate and natural setting while negotiating the dominant influences of Wright and Mies They also reveal how residential clients typically middle class professionals progressive in their thinking helped to trailblaze modern architecture in America Though reflecting different approaches to site space structure and materials the examples in Modern in the Middle reveal an abundance of astonishing houses that have never been collected into one study until now

Disabling Domesticity Michael Rembis, 2016-12-20 Bringing together a range of authors from the multidisciplinary field of disability studies this book uses disability and the experiences of disabled people living in the United States and Canada to explore and analyze dynamic sites of human interaction in both historical and contemporary contexts to provide readers with new ways of envisioning home care and family Contributors to Disabling Domesticity focus on the varied domestic sites where intimate and interdependent human relations are formed and maintained Analyzing domesticity through the lens of disability forces readers to think in new ways about family and household forms care work an ethic of care reproductive labor gendered and generational conflicts and cooperation ageing dependence and local and global economies and political systems in part by bringing the notion of interdependence which undergirds all of the chapters in this book into the foreground

Design for Adaptability in Mass Housing Guopeng Li, 2020-11-05 Before discussing the research itself in greater depth it is beneficial at this stage to introduce the background to the research To do so the chapter is divided into four parts The first part of the chapter summarises terminologies associated with adaptability and goes on to define and elaborate on the meaning of adaptability in this research study The second part of this chapter defines mass housing the development of mass housing and its problems are also illustrated In the third part as the key solution for addressing housing occupants requirements and accommodating changes the importance of adaptability in improving overall housing quality particularly from a social financial and environmental point of view is outlined The sustainability of adaptability is also discussed Even though studies of adaptability have been developed structurally functionally technically and financially adaptability still occupies a marginal position due to the production of mass housing The final part of the chapter rethinks the notion of adaptability for mass housing Factors of mass housing related to social financial technical and design issues and which address adaptability are explored Lastly it is revealed that the design aspect of adaptability is chosen as the research focus in this research study
