Fighting for Control Lina-Maria Murillo, 2025-01-07

Taking Flight M. Houston Johnson, 2019-02-21

Taking Flight explores the emergence of commercial aviation between the world wars and in the midst of the Great Depression to show that the industry's dramatic growth resulted from a unique combination of federal policy, technological innovations, and public interest in air travel. Historian M. Houston Johnson traces the evolution of commercial flying from the US Army's trial airmail service in the spring of 1918 to the passage of the pivotal Air Commerce Act of 1938. Johnson emphasizes the role of federal policy, particularly as guided by both Herbert Hoover and Franklin Roosevelt, to reveal the close working relationship between federal officials and industry leaders, as well as an increasing dependence on federal assistance by airline, airframe, and engine manufacturers. Taking Flight highlights the federal government's successful efforts to foster a nascent industry in the midst of an economic crisis without resorting to nationalization, a path taken by virtually all European countries during the same era. It also underscores an important point of continuity between Hoover's policies and Roosevelt's New Deal, a sharp departure from many interpretations of Depression-era business history, and shows how both governmental and corporate actors were able to harness America's ongoing fascination with flying to further a larger economic agenda and facilitate the creation of the world's largest and most efficient commercial aviation industry. This glimpse into the golden age of flight contributes not only to the history of aviation but also to the larger history of the United States during the Great Depression and the period between the world wars. Feminists and Party Politics Lisa Young, 2000

The contemporary women's movement has transformed North American society. Change has been greatest in the realm of everyday life, but feminism has also challenged the substance and practice of politics. Feminists and Party Politics examines the effort to bring feminism into the formal political arena through established political parties in Canada and the United States. Going Public Shirley K. Rose, Irwin Weiser, 2010-03-02 An important new resource for WPA preparation courses in rhetoric and composition PhD programs. In Going Public, Rose and Weiser moderate a discussion of the role of the writing program vis-à-vis the engagement movement, the service learning movement, and current interest in public discourse, civic rhetoric among scholars of rhetoric and composition. This is a thoughtful collection on the ways that engagement-focused programs may be changing conceptions of WPA identity. As institutions begin to include more explicit engagement with citizen and stakeholder communities as an element of their mission, writing program administrators find themselves with an opportunity to articulate the ways in which writing program goals and purposes significantly contribute to achieving these new institutional goals. Writing programs are typically situated at points where students make the transition from community to college, e.g., first-year composition, or from college to community, e.g., professional writing, and are already dedicated to developing literacies that are critically needed in communities. In Going Public, Rose and Weiser locate their discussion in the context of three current conversations in higher education: 1) the engagement movement, particularly as this movement serves to address and respond to calls for greater accountability to broader publics; 2) recent interest in public discourse, civic rhetoric among scholars of rhetorical history and contemporary rhetorical theory; 3) the service learning movement in higher education especially the ways in which college and university writing programs have contributed to this movement While there have been a number of publications describing service learning and community leadership programs most of these focus on curricular elements and address administrative issues if at all primarily from a curricular perspective The emphasis of the current book is on the ways that engagement focused programs change conceptions of WPA identity Going Public then is not only a significant contribution to the scholarly literature but also supplies an important new resource for WPA preparation courses in rhetoric and composition PhD programs
