Understanding convergent evasion mechanisms in cancer and chronic infection: Implications for immunotherapy Matthias Theobald,Hansjörg Schild,2024-06-04 The complex interactions between the innate and adaptive immune systems function to recognize and clear pathogens or transformed cells but inefficient interactions between these two systems can result in harmful immunologic responses including chronic infections and the development of cancer Several hallmarks of dysfunctional adaptive immune responses often detected in tumors share specific features with ineffective immunity in chronic infections The members of the micromilieu actively participate in the process of tumorigenesis or chronification of infection by modulating innate and adaptive immune system interactions leading e g to insufficient T cell responses The best example is given by the acquisition of an exhausted state of cytotoxic CD8 T cells CTLs responding to chronic infections or tumors that are associated with elevated expression of inhibitory receptors and impaired cytokine response Targeting these major inhibitory pathways by immune checkpoint blockers represents a prime example of successful clinical translation of tumor specific immunotherapies Understanding the mechanisms behind mal adaptations of the immune system is crucial for achieving therapeutic benefits The establishment and co evolution of a dynamic microenvironment niche constituted by the recruitment of numerous cell types dampen immune responses and thus contribute to the development of neoplastic transformation as well as infection Although there are examples of successful immunotherapeutic approaches CAR T cells immune checkpoint inhibitors or mRNA vaccination a large percentage of patients with cancer or chronic infections still do not benefit from these therapies or develop severe immune related adverse events The reasons for these failures are not well understood A possible explanation might be that current immunotherapies target predominantly the effector arm of the immune system by trying to reactivate dysfunctional T cells but do not sufficiently address the influence of the innate immune system and the contributions of the tumor microenvironment TME niche The main problem we would like to address in this special issue is how inappropriate function of the innate immune system affects adaptive immunity and contributes to inefficient anti cancer immunity and chronification of infections The central goal is to provide a more precise understanding of the various common and novel immune evasion mechanisms in cancers and in chronic infections to obtain a detailed map of common and disease specific immune escape checkpoints To that aim we want to compile a wide array of interdisciplinary studies exploring a comparative and multi layered analysis of mechanisms responsible for inefficient immune responses including novel approaches i e multi omics or epigenetic signaling We would also like to combine studies from different fields including basic and clinical immunology oncology and virology microbiology We welcome the submission of Original Research Review Mini Review Methods Case report and Perspective articles that cover but are not limited to the following topics Convergent mechanisms supporting immune escape in preclinical models tumors and chronic infections Convergent evasion mechanisms mediated by tumor infiltrating suppressive cells Treg MDSC macro phages soluble mediators signaling metabolism Convergent immune evasion mechanisms mediated by chronic infection viral or parasite Novel strategies to modulate the TME by direct or indirect targeting of immune suppressor cells Approaches to enhance persistence and resilience of anticancer T cells Combinatorial therapeutic strategies mRNA antibodies immune checkpoint blockers that target convergent immune evasion mechanisms Manuscripts consisting solely of bioinformatics or computational analysis of public genomic or transcriptomic databases which are not accompanied by robust and relevant validation clinical cohort or biological validation in vitro or in vivo are out of scope for this topic disease and eligibility for treatment prioritize treatment for those with most advanced liver disease and at greatest risk of mortality and recommend the preferred use of nucleos(t)ide analogues with a high barrier to drug resistance tenofovir and entecavir and entecavir in children aged 2-11 years for first and second line treatment. These guidelines also recommend lifelong treatment in those with cirrhosis and regular monitoring for disease progression, toxicity of drugs and early detection of HCC. An additional chapter highlights management considerations for specific populations including those coinfecting with HIV, HCV and hepatitis D virus (HDV), children and adolescents and pregnant women.

Guidelines for the prevention, diagnosis, care and treatment for people with chronic hepatitis B infection World Health Organization, 2024-03-28

Hepatitis B (HBV) infection is a major public health problem and cause of chronic liver disease. The 2024 HBV guidelines provide updated evidence-informed recommendations on key priority topics. These include expanded and simplified treatment criteria for adults but now also for adolescents, expanded eligibility for antiviral prophylaxis for pregnant women to prevent mother-to-child transmission of HBV, improving HBV diagnostics through use of point-of-care HBV DNA, viral load and reflex approaches to HBV DNA testing, who to test and how to test for HDV infection and approaches to promote delivery of high quality HBV services including strategies to promote adherence to long-term antiviral therapy and retention in care. The 2024 guidelines include 11 updated chapters with new recommendations and also update existing chapters without new recommendations such as those on treatment monitoring and surveillance for liver cancer.

Chronic Hepatitis B Virus Infection in the Chinese, 2001. Uncorrected OCR Abstract of thesis entitled Chronic Hepatitis B Virus Infection in the Chinese Natural History, Sequelae, Treatment and Prevention. Submitted by Yuen Man Fung for the degree of Doctor of Medicine at The University of Hong Kong in August 2001. The aims of this thesis were: 1. to delineate the natural history of Chinese patients with hepatitis B virus (HBV) infection; 2. to assess the two approved treatments, interferon alpha (IFN-α) and lamivudine, in HBV; 3. to study the pathogenesis, immunology, screening program and treatment of HCC; and 4. to evaluate HBV vaccines in preventing HBV infection. In a study of 146 Chinese HBV patients, mannose-binding lectin mutation was associated with increased chance of cirrhotic complications. The most important factor for the development of cirrhotic complications in a study of 3433 Chinese HBV patients was increasing age. The median age of development of cirrhotic complications was 55-60 years old. Though HBeAg seroconversion led to a low viraemic state, 60-70% of patients who had cirrhotic complications were anti-HBe positive. HBeAg seroconversion did not protect Chinese patients from the development of cirrhotic complications. IFN-α treatment improves prognosis in Caucasian HBV patients. But a nine-year follow-up study involving 411 Chinese patients showed that IFN-α treatment did not increase cumulative HBeAg seroconversion rate and more importantly did not decrease cirrhotic complication. Prolonged lamivudine treatment is associated with the emergence of YMDD variants. The factors associated with HBV DNA breakthrough were examined in 159 patients. Patients with higher baseline HBV DNA and alanine transaminase (ALT) levels were associated with earlier YMDD variants development. Patients with HBV DNA levels 103

copies/ml at 6 months of therapy had 63% chance of developing YMDD variant within 29 months of follow up. Patients with YMDD variants could still develop HBeAg seroconversion. The pathogenic role of YMDD variants is still unclear.
