

Supporting someone who is dying

It is a natural instinct to help a dying family member or friend.

Your care, empathy and compassion shown in practical support will be challenged in witnessing their suffering. At the same time we may worry if we are doing the "right thing" in meeting the needs of the person who is dying and not causing harm or distress. As a result, you may be unsure about how best to help.

Dr Simon Noble, a British palliative care physician, writing in the book 'How to Have a Good Death', advises: "One way to approach the question of what the dying person needs from you is to consider what he or she needed from you when they weren't dying."

"If you are the person's partner, that's what he or she still needs: someone to be there. If he or she was your mate who you went down to the pub and talked rubbish with, that's what he or she needs now: someone to hang out with."

He adds: "From conversations with patients who are dying, it seems that the thing they value most from friends, loved ones and professionals is openness and honesty."

"Admitting that you don't know what to say is more valued than some banal comment offering false hope or promises. They are not looking for you to make it all right. They just want you to be you."

"Henderson, D. et. al (2006) How to have a good death (London: Dorling Kindersley), p59-60.

Living Well Dying Well:

Living Well, Dying Well Judy Stevens-Long Phd, Dohrea Bardell Phd, 2018-07-09 Attitudes to death and dying are changing in the United States Today we are living longer yet with the acute awareness that what we do now will affect our remaining time Prompted by a big push from baby boomers our society is moving towards a culture that provides a greater array of positive choices in the final phase of our lives This should inspire all of us to find new ways to create joy and comfort until the very last moment of life Written by Social Sciences Professor Dr Judy Stevens Long author of the bestselling book Adult Life with Dr Dohrea Bardell a Fellow at the Institute for Social Innovation this book contains all the information you need to ensure that the last years of your life or the life of someone you love will be as satisfying comfortable and as productive as possible Ἐσχατος Ἐχθρος, or the Death of Death in the death of Christ, etc Richard MAYHEW, 1679 Living Well and Dying Faithfully John Swinton, Richard Payne, 2009-11-10 Living Well and Dying Faithfully explores how Christian practices love prayer lament compassion and so on can contribute to the process of dying well Working on the premise that one dies the way one lives the book is unique in its constructive dialogue between theology and medicine as offering two complementary modes of care Mercy Peter Roebbelen, 2018-02-01 In this Tuesdays with Morrie type book a pastor reveals lessons for living he s learned from the dying What would you do with your life if you knew it was going to end soon Mercy is a pastor s recording of the life lessons he s discovered as a result of sitting at the bedsides of courageous people facing death s certainty Peter Roebbelen explores the gifts that people have given him the wisdom that he s gleaned from them almost as if he s been the one being counseled rather than the other way around This joyful and instructive book will encourage anyone who reads it to live to the fullest in the present and to love the people around them as never before

Compassionate Communities Klaus Wegleitner, Katharina Heimerl, Allan Kellehear, 2015-06-26 Compassionate communities are communities that provide assistance for those in need of end of life care separate from any official health service provision that may already be available within the community This idea was developed in 2005 in Allan Kellehear s seminal volume Compassionate Cities Public Health and End of Life Care In the ensuing ten years the theoretical aspects of the idea have been continually explored primarily rehearsing academic concerns rather than practical ones Compassionate Communities Case Studies from Britain and Europe provides the first major volume describing and examining compassionate community experiments in end of life care from a highly practical perspective Focusing on community development initiatives and practice challenges the book offers practitioners and policy makers from the health and social care sectors practical discussions on the strengths and limitations of such initiatives Furthermore not limited to providing practice choices the book also offers an important and timely impetus for other practitioners and policy makers to begin thinking about developing their own possible compassionate communities An essential read for academic practitioner and policy audiences in the fields of public health community development health social sciences aged care bereavement care and
