information from both neuroscience research and Zen studies This sequel to the widely read Zen and the Brain continues James Austin's explorations into the key interrelationships between Zen Buddhism and brain research In Zen Brain Reflections Austin, a clinical neurologist researcher and Zen practitioner, examines the evolving psychological processes and brain changes associated with the path of long range meditative training Austin draws not only on the latest neuroscience research and new neuroimaging studies but also on Zen literature and his personal experience with alternate states of consciousness Zen Brain Reflections takes up where the earlier book left off It addresses such questions as how do placebos and acupuncture change the brain Can neuroimaging studies localize the sites where our notions of self arise How can the latest brain imaging methods monitor meditators more effectively How do long years of meditative training plus brief enlightened states produce pivotal transformations in the physiology of the brain In many chapters testable hypotheses suggest ways to correlate normal brain functions and meditative training with the phenomena of extraordinary states of consciousness After briefly introducing the topic of Zen and describing recent research into meditation Austin reviews the latest studies on the amygdala frontotemporal interactions and paralimbic extensions of the limbic system He then explores different states of consciousness both the early superficial absorptions and the later major peak experiences This discussion begins with the states called kensho and satori and includes a fresh analysis of their several different expressions of oneness He points beyond the still more advanced states toward that rare ongoing stage of enlightenment that is manifest as sage wisdom Finally with reference to a delayed moonlight phase of kensho Austin envisions novel links between migraines and metaphors moonlight and mysticism The Zen perspective on the self and consciousness is an ancient one Readers will discover how relevant Zen is to the neurosciences and how each field can illuminate the other Palliative Care Perspectives James Hallenbeck, 2003 Dr Hallenbeck has written a guide for clinicians who want an introduction to palliative care that addresses big picture issues as well as provides specific practical advice Topics addressed range from an overview of death and dying in the modern world to discussions of pain and symptom management communication techniques and palliative care consults Dying: What Happens When We Die? Evan Thompson, 2014-09-02 In the ancient Indian epic Mahabharata the Lord of Death asks What is the most wondrous thing in the world and his son answers It is that all around us people can be dying and we don't believe it can happen to us This refusal to face the inevitability of death is especially prevalent in modern Western societies We look to science to tell us how things are but biomedicine and neuroscience divest death of any personal significance by presenting it as just the breakdown of the body and the cessation of consciousness The Tibetan Buddhist perspective stands in sharp contrast to this modern scientific notion of death This tradition conceives dying not as the mere termination of living processes within the body but as a rite of passage and transformation of consciousness Physical death in this tradition initiates a transition from one of the six bardos in between states of consciousness to an opportunity for total enlightenment In Dying: What Happens When We Die Evan Thompson establishes a middle ground between the depersonalized scientific account of death and the highly ritualized notion of death found in Tibetan Buddhism Thompson's depiction of death and dying offers an insightful neurobiological analysis while also delving into the phenomenology of death examining the psychological and spiritual effects of dying on human consciousness In a trenchant critique of the near death experience literature he shows that these experiences do not provide evidence for the continuation of consciousness after death but also that they must be understood phenomenologically and not in purely neuroscience terms We must learn to tolerate the ultimate ungraspability of death by bearing witness to dying and death instead of turning away from them We can learn to face the experience of dying through meditative practice and to view the final moments of life not as a frightening inevitability to be shunned or ignored but as a deeply personal experience to be accepted and even embraced
