Whole Lesson	Compare student students' that last day are discussed here and without heard from the most or authors throughout this personal narratives writing unit. Read the beginning of both books. Jane felt that this moment was so special to her that she wanted to write about it -- she stretched it over all of these pages. How do you think these authors come up with these ideas? Turn and tell the person next to you how do you think these two authors come up with their ideas? Jane off you noticed that both authors may have written things down that happened to them, or to people they knew. Jane off you noticed that these aren't just ordinary every day moments. They are special or memorable moments to these authors. - before in their every-day lives, they grabbed a hold of these moments that got them thinking "hey, I should write a story about that!" Suggest Jane Follen and Angela Johnson might use a notebook to record the little details that later become their published stories. Small moment ideas occur to writers all the time-- so writers know that they need to be prepared to get an idea down on paper so they do not forget about it. It could be the middle of the night when an idea occurs to a writer. Maybe Jane thought it would make a good story in the middle of the night when she heard her daughter and husband go sailing. So she wrote up and jotted an idea down for later on that they topics notepad-- like this one. Maybe she writes David and Heidi up in the night. Winston's last night tried to do what Jane and Angela and so many writers do. I sat on my couch and thought about this moment that stood out for me-- ones I'd want to write about. Like some time when I was 8 years old and I decided to go down a gigantic hill on my bike with rollerblades on too. I thought yes! I had a story I could write! And I wrote it down in my notepad. Right now, think of a small moment in your life-- one that stands out from every-day ordinary moments and tell that idea to the person next to you. Try to tell them why that moment means to you. When it is your turn to listen, be the kind of listener who cares. Ask for more information if you don't understand why their moment is special.
After Engagement	Now, I want you to get started by telling the beginning of your story to your partner. Talk it by trying to make it interesting. I tell them how the story all began. Tell them about the setting, what you were doing, and make what you were doing. Remember, you want to show your listener just how important and special this story is to you!
