What are the conclusions of the study? The conclusions of the study are that a supervised exercise program can improve the physical and psychological health of older adults with chronic low back pain.

QUESTION A 60-year-old male with a 10-year history of type 2 diabetes mellitus presents with a 2-week history of increasing fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite. He reports that he has been unable to eat as much as he used to and has lost about 10 pounds. He also mentions that he has been feeling more tired than usual and has noticed some changes in his vision. He has no recent travel history and no known contact with anyone who has been ill. He is currently taking insulin and metformin. His last medical check-up was 6 months ago, where his blood sugar was well-controlled. He is a retired construction worker and lives with his wife. He has no other medical conditions and no known allergies.

ANSWER The patient's symptoms of fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite, along with his history of type 2 diabetes mellitus, suggest a possible complication of his condition. The most likely diagnosis is diabetic ketoacidosis (DKA), a serious complication of diabetes that occurs when the body produces high levels of blood sugar and ketones. DKA is characterized by symptoms such as increased thirst, frequent urination, nausea, vomiting, and abdominal pain. In severe cases, it can lead to confusion, dehydration, and even coma. The patient's weight loss and decreased appetite are also consistent with DKA. The fact that his blood sugar was well-controlled 6 months ago suggests that his diabetes may be becoming more difficult to manage, possibly due to a change in his insulin regimen or other factors. The patient's symptoms warrant immediate medical attention to prevent further complications.
