Postcritical Management Studies Ghislain Deslandes,2023-05-26 This book is the first of its kind to offer a new definition of contemporary management It uses Michel Henry s philosophy and takes the real sensitive and pathetic subjectivity of individuals as the starting point of the analysis as opposed to the usual large categories of representations resources images and discourses This book thus proposes to rethink management by insisting on the dialectic of strength and vulnerability its power of constraint imitation and imagination and finally its framework of action situated in a fourfold concern for the self for people for institutions and for the environment These different notions are useful in order to experience a deeper understanding of management that is free from the obsolescence of the distant recommendations of ancient protomanagement and the outdated and dubious prescriptions of the so called scientific management
