In the Company of Black Men Craig Steven Wilder, 2001 Traces the development of African American community traditions over three centuries From the subaltern assemblies of the enslaved in colonial New York City to the benevolent New York African Society of the early national era to the formation of the African Blood Brotherhood in twentieth century Harlem voluntary associations have been a fixture of African American communities In the Company of Black Men examines New York City over three centuries to show that enslaved Africans provided the institutional foundation upon which African American religious political and social culture could flourish Arguing that the universality of the voluntary tradition in African American communities has its basis in collectivism a behavioral and rhetorical tendency to privilege the group over the individual it explores the institutions that arose as enslaved Africans exploited the potential for group action and mass resistance Craig Steven Wilder s research is particularly exciting in its assertion that Africans entered the Americas equipped with intellectual traditions and sociological models that facilitated a communitarian response to oppression Presenting a dramatic shift from previous work which has viewed African American male associations as derivative and imitative of white male counterparts In the Company of Black Men provides a ground breaking template for investigating antebellum black institutions
