IRT/PDP 8 CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

Old Mother Hubbard receives a notice in the mail informing her that her welfare benefits have just been cut off. This is the first that Mother has heard about the possibility of losing her benefits. Mother claims that this action violates her due process rights.

Does it?

Yes. Procedural due process rights only attach when one is deprived of a property or liberty right. Deprivation of one's disability benefits is a right that does qualify for protection. Determining the amount of protection necessary requires balancing the importance of the property or liberty interest in question and the risk an arbitrary decision in a particular procedure would
