Creegan Miller, 2022-05-24 Challenging the distinctions between old and new media and narratives about the deprecation of orality in favor of inscribed forms The Maya Art of Speaking Writing draws from Maya concepts of tz'ib recorded knowledge and tz'ij ch'ol and ch'owen orality to look at expressive work across media and languages Based on nearly a decade of fieldwork in the Guatemalan highlands Tiffany D Creegan Miller discusses images that are sonic pictorial gestural and alphabetic She reveals various forms of creativity and agency that are woven through a rich media landscape in Indigenous Guatemala as well as Maya diasporas in Mexico and the United States Miller discusses how technologies of inscription and their mediations are shaped by human editors translators communities and audiences as well as by voices from the natural world These texts push back not just on linear and compartmentalized Western notions of media but also on the idea of the singular author creator scholar or artist removed from their environment The persistence of orality and the interweaving of media forms combine to offer a challenge to audiences to participate in decolonial actions through language preservation The Maya Art of Speaking Writing calls for centering Indigenous epistemologies by doing research in and through Indigenous languages as we engage in debates surrounding Indigenous literatures anthropology decoloniality media studies orality and government officials and journalists Learn how to speak and write Spanish in 30 days YouGuide Ltd, Native Peoples of the World Steven L. Danver, 2015-03-10 This work examines the world's indigenous peoples, their cultures, the countries in which they reside, and the issues that impact these groups Disrupting Early Childhood Education Research Will Parnell, Jeanne Marie Iorio, 2015-12-22 Recent and increasing efforts to standardize young children's academic performance have shifted the emphases of education toward normative practices and away from qualitative, substantive intentions. Connection to human experience, compassion for societal ailments, and the joys of learning are straining under the pressure of quantitative research, competition, and test scores exemplified by federal funding competitions and policymaking. Disrupting Early Childhood Education Research critically interrogates the traditional foundations of early childhood research practices to disrupt the status quo through imaginative, cutting-edge research in diverse U.S. and international contexts. Its chapters are driven by empirical data derived from unique research projects and a variety of contemporary methodologies that include phenomenological studies, auto-ethnographic writings, action-oriented studies, arts-based methodologies, and other innovative approaches. By giving voice to marginalized social science researchers who are active in learning school and early education sectors, this volume explores the meanings of actionable and everyday approaches based on the experiences of young children, their families, and educators First Language Attrition Monika S. Schmid, Barbara Köpcke, 2013-05-22 This volume consists of a collection of papers that focus on structural-grammatical aspects of the process of first language attrition. It presents an overview of current research, methodological issues, and important questions regarding first language attrition. In particular, it addresses the two most prominent issues in current L1 attrition research: Can attrition effects impact on features of core syntax, or are they limited to interface phenomena? and What is the role of age at onset (pre/post puberty) in this regard? By investigating attrition in a variety of settings, from a case study of a Spanish-speaking adoptee in the US to an empirical investigation of more than 50 long-term attriters of Turkish in the Netherlands, the investigations presented take a new perspective on these issues.
