Infant Perception and Cognition Lisa M. Oakes, 2011 The cognitive revolution in the 1950s and 1960s led researchers to view the human mind like a computer as an information processing system that encodes represents and stores information and is constrained by limits on hardware the brain and software learning strategies and rules The emergence of new behavioral computational and neuroscience methodologies has deeply expanded psychologists understanding of the workings of the infant child and adult mind One result is that research has focused on mechanisms of change over developmental time in the information processing mind In this book Lisa Oakes Cara Cashon Marianella Casasola and David Rakison bring together the recent findings and theories about the origins and early development of the information processing mind and provide insight into the future directions in the study of infant perception and cognition The contributors represent a wide range of research areas in the study of infant perception and cognition who emphasize the use of diverse methodological techniques to address key questions about development Their chapters demonstrate how the combination of historical perspectives on the information processing approach to cognition and recent advances in behavioral computational and neuroscience approaches to cognition has contributed to our understanding of how abilities ranging from visual attention to face processing to object categorization have developed during infancy Across this broad range of topics it is clear that much of our modern understanding of infant perceptual and cognitive development emerges from the foundation of classic information processing models of development such as that of Leslie B Cohen 1991 The recent advances illustrated in this book show how researchers have built on this foundation to uncover the mechanisms that drive developmental change What Can Parents Do? Margaret Kerr, Håkan Stattin, Rutger C. M. E. Guay,Herbert Marsh,Dennis M. McInerney,Rhonda G. Craven,2015-06-01 The concept of the Self has a long history that dates back from the ancient Greeks such as Aristotle to more contemporary thinkers such as Wundt James Mead Cooley Freud Rogers and Erikson Tesser Felson 2000 Research on the Self relates to a range of phenomena including self esteem self concept self protection self verification self awareness identity self efficacy self determination etc that could be sharply different or very similar Despite this long tradition of thinkers and the numerous studies conducted on the Self this concept is still not very well defined More precisely it is not a precise object of study but rather a collection of loosely related subtopics Baumesiter 1998 Also in the philosophical literature the legitimacy of the concept of self has been brought into question Some authors have argued that the self is not a psychological entity per se but rather an illusion created by the complex interplay between cognitive and neurological subsystems Zahavi 2005 Although no definitive consensus has been reached regarding the Self we emphasize in this volume that the Self and its related phenomena including self concept motivation and identity are crucial for understanding consciousness and therefore important to understand human behavior Self concept motivation and identity Underpinning success with research and practice provides thus a unique insight into self concept and its relationship to motivation and identity from varied theoretical and empirical perspectives This volume is intended to develop both theoretical and methodological ideas and to present empirical evidence demonstrating the importance of theory and research to effective practice
