for scholars in these respective arenas led by pioneering scholarship in Islamic studies Gender and Violence in Islamic Societies Zahia Smail Salhi, 2013-05-22 As a result of the uprisings that spread across the Middle East and North Africa in late 2010 and 2011 the issue of state public violence against both men and women dominated the headlines But gender based violence in both its public and private forms has for the most part remained unnoticed and is often ignored The forms that this kind of violence can take are influenced by cultural norms and religious beliefs as well as economic and political circumstances In Gender and Violence in Islamic Societies violence is perceived not only as physical harm but includes various forms of violence directed at women because they are women These include segregation in the workplace and limiting women's access to wealth gender stereotyping in the media and education verbal aggression and humiliation control of women's finances and income forced veiling restricted access to education and health Gender based violence is thus analysed in its various forms and localities encompassing both the public and private spheres within the family the general community at work and in various state institutions Here Zahia Smail Salhi brings together a wide range of examples of gender based violence across the Middle East and North Africa from discrimination in the workplace in Jordan to the physical abuse of underage domestic workers in Morocco and from psychological and verbal violence against women in Tunisia and Algeria to the practice of female genital mutilation in Egypt The evidence demonstrates that the violence far from being of universal character across the region is instead diverse in both its intensity and in the processes of addressing such violence

Islam, Society, and Politics in Central Asia Pauline Jones, 2017-07-20 During the 1990s there was a general consensus that Central Asia was witnessing an Islamic revival after independence and that this occurrence would follow similar events throughout the Islamic world in the prior two decades which had negative effects on both social and political development Twenty years later we are still struggling to fully understand the transformation of Islam in a region that evolved through a complex and dynamic process involving diversity in belief and practice religious authority and political intervention This volume seeks to shed light on these crucial questions by bringing together an international group of scholars to offer a fresh perspective on Central Asian states and societies The chapters provide analysis through four distinct categories the everyday practice of Islam across local communities state policies toward Islam focusing on attempts to regulate public and private practice through cultural legal and political institutions and how these differ from Soviet policies how religious actors influence communities in the practice of Islam state policies towards the religion and subsequent communal responses to state regulations and how knowledge of and interaction with the larger Islamic world is shaping Central Asia's current Islamic revival and state responses The contributors a multidisciplinary and international group of leading scholars develop fresh insights that both corroborate and contradict findings from previous research while also highlighting the problem of making any generalizations about Islam in individual states or the region As such this volume provides new and impactful analysis for scholars students and policy makers concerned with Central Asia Muslims and Others in Early Islamic Society Robert Hoyland,2021-03-24 The interaction between Muslims and the other religious denominations of the Middle East in the period 620 1020 is the subject of this volume This is arguably the single most important issue in the history of the early Islamic Middle East since the Muslims were initially a minority in the lands that they had conquered and so had to reach some modus vivendi with the various religious communities in their realm Fifteen articles by leading scholars shed light on this process from a number of different perspectives historical conceptual legal social and theological An introduction both gives an overview and examines possibilities for future research The period under study is demarcated at one end by the Prophet Muhammed d 632 who as the Qur an tells us had to deal with Jews Christians and polytheists At the other end lies the great legal political thinker Manardi d ca 1020 by whose time the Middle East had become substantially Islamicised
