Mathematics for the Life Sciences Glenn Ledder, Jenna P. Carpenter, Timothy D. Comar, 2013 There is a gap between the extensive mathematics background that is beneficial to biologists and the minimal mathematics background biology students acquire in their courses The result is an undergraduate education in biology with very little quantitative content New mathematics courses must be devised with the needs of biology students in mind In this volume authors from a variety of institutions address some of the problems involved in reforming mathematics curricula for biology students The problems are sorted into three themes Models Processes and Directions It is difficult for mathematicians to generate curriculum ideas for the training of biologists so a number of the curriculum models that have been introduced at various institutions comprise the Models section Processes deals with taking that great course and making sure it is institutionalized in both the biology department as a requirement and in the mathematics department as a course that will live on even if the creator of the course is no longer on the faculty Directions looks to the future with each paper laying out a case for pedagogical developments that the authors would like to see

Fulfilling the Promise National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Commission on Life Sciences, Committee on High-School Biology Education, 1990-02-01 Why are students today not learning biology appreciating its importance in their lives or pursuing it as a career Experts believe dismal learning experiences in biology classes are causing the vast majority of students to miss information that could help them lead healthier lives and make more intelligent decisions as adults How can we improve the teaching of biology throughout the school curriculum Fulfilling the Promise offers a vision of what biology education in our schools could be along with practical hard hitting recommendations on how to make that vision a reality Noting that many of their recommended changes will be controversial the authors explore in detail the major questions that must be answered to bring biology education to an acceptable standard how elementary middle and high school biology education arrived at its present state what impediments stand in the way of improving biology education how to properly prepare biology teachers and encourage their continuing good performance and what type of leadership is needed to improve biology education
