As noted earlier, the 2004 election was a watershed year for the U.S. health insurance industry. The election of George W. Bush, who was elected on a platform of universal coverage, resulted in the passage of the Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003 (MMA) and the creation of the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). The MMA provided for the creation of a new federal agency, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS), which would be responsible for administering the Medicare and Medicaid programs. The MMA also provided for the creation of a new federal agency, the Office of the Inspector General (OIG), which would be responsible for overseeing the Medicare and Medicaid programs. The MMA also provided for the creation of a new federal agency, the Office of the Secretary of HHS, which would be responsible for overseeing the HHS department. The MMA also provided for the creation of a new federal agency, the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Health Policy and Law, which would be responsible for overseeing the HHS department's health policy and law activities.
