inequalities that they face This book aims to fill this gap in the literature The chapters demonstrate that the students and their families are finding ways of acquiring forms of capital that encourage and sustain their participation in higher education Contributions from the UK the USA and Australia reveal that the issues surrounding the inclusion of non traditional students are broadly similar in different countries It should be read by all those leading managing or teaching in institutions of higher education and all students or intending students whatever their background Organising

Higher Education in the Global Age Daniel Araya, Peter Marber, 2013-11-20 Discussions on globalization now routinely focus on the economic impact of developing countries in Asia Africa the Middle East the former Soviet Union and Latin America Only twenty five years ago many developing countries were largely closed societies Today the growing power of emerging markets is reordering the geopolitical landscape On a purchasing power parity basis emerging economies now constitute half of the world's economic activity Financial markets too are seeing growing integration Asia now accounts for 1/3 of world stock markets more than double that of just 15 years ago Given current trajectories most economists predict that China and India alone will account for half of global output by 2050 almost a complete return to their positions prior to the Industrial Revolution How is higher education shaping and being shaped by these massive tectonic shifts As education rises as a geopolitical priority it has converged with discussions on economic policy and a global labor market As part of the Routledge Studies in Emerging Societies series this edited collection focuses on the globalization of higher education particularly the increasing symbiosis between advanced and developing countries Bringing together senior scholars journalists and practitioners from around the world this collection explores the relatively new and changing higher education landscape

The State of the Art in Student Engagement Carl Senior, 2015-07-10 There is an extensive literature conducted from a range of theoretical perspectives and methodologies on the role of groups and student learning in higher education However here the concept of the group is heavily contested at a theoretical level but within higher education practice characterizing the group has tended to be clear cut Groups of students are often formed within the parameters of specific educational programs to address explicitly defined learning objectives These groups are often small scale and achieve tasks through cooperative or collaborative learning Cooperative learning involves students dividing roles and responsibilities between group members so learning becomes an independent process and outcome On the other hand collaborative learning involves students working together by developing shared meanings and knowledge to solve a task or problem From this perspective learning is conceptualized as both a social process and individual outcome That is collaborative learning may facilitate individual student conceptual understanding and hence lead to higher academic achievement The empirical evidence is encouraging as has been shown that students working collaboratively tend to achieve higher grades than students working independently However the above perspectives on student engagement assume that groups are formed within the confines of formal learning environments e g lecture theaters involve students on the same degree program have the explicit function of achieving a learning task and disband once this has been achieved However students may also use existing social networks such as friendship groups as a mechanism for learning which may occur outside of formal learning environments There is an extensive literature on the role and benefits of friendship groups on student learning within primary and secondary education but there is a distinct lack of research within higher education This ebook is innovative and ambitious and will highlight and consolidate the current understanding of the role that student based engagement behaviors may serve in effective pedagogy A unique aspect of this research topic will be the fact that scholars will also be welcome to submit articles that describe the efficacy of the full range of approaches that have been employed to facilitate student engagement across the sector

Continuing Higher Education and Lifelong Learning Michaela Knust, Anke Hanft, 2009-08-02 Anke Hanft and Michaela Knust The present study examines and compares the structure and organisation of continuing higher education in six countries Austria Finland France Germany the UK and the USA The focus is not just on current continuing education provisions at higher education institutions but also on the institutions themselves and their surrounding milieu The study also attempts to move away from a purely national angle and to approach the topic from an international perspective The conclusion is reached that when it comes to the development establishment and professional implementation of continuing education provisions German higher education institutions lag behind the other countries in the comparison in almost all areas The main findings in terms of the three levels system institution and programme are summarised below

1 Continuing Education in the Higher Education System There are considerable divergences both nationally and internationally in the definition of the German term wissenschaftliche Weiterbildung academic continuing education In the English speaking world a variety of terms such as lifelong learning adult education continuing education continuing higher education university level continuing education or continuing professional development are often used as synonyms without any precise differentiation and this is not perceived as a problem

Improving Opportunities to Engage in Learning Nalita James, Hugh Busher, 2018-05-20 Improving Opportunities to Engage in Learning investigates the experiences of mature adult learners returning to formal education The book challenges the policy discourses in which Access to Higher Education survives by suggesting that continuing education is more about determination by students to alter their identities and career opportunities than meeting narrow performative criteria of financial targets Chapters explore students struggles with institutional and social structures in the current political and socio economic climate before identifying how the transformation of their learner identities is facilitated in the courses by collaborative cultures and supportive tutors The book addresses a research gap in knowledge about students and tutors experiences of Access to Higher Education courses presenting a broad perspective on the importance and difficulties of such courses through listening to the voices of students and tutors undertaking a variety of Access to HE pathways The authors argue that despite success on their courses benefiting the national economy as well as students individually the social and financial costs of continuing education is almost entirely shifted onto students shoulders by policymakers Despite the costs students can still see Access to HE as a chance to improve their lives reflecting the neoliberal discourse of personal responsibility and risk embedded in broader national social and policy discourses Improving Opportunities to Engage in Learning will be of great interest to researchers academics and postgraduate students in the fields of further and higher education widening participation social justice and sociology of education and education policy and politics
