A collection of various beaded jewelry items is displayed on a light gray surface. The items include several necklaces of different lengths and styles, some with large circular beads and others with smaller beads. There are also several pairs of earrings, some with large, ornate designs and others with simpler, more delicate ones. A small dish containing a pile of small, dark beads is visible in the upper left. A spool of black thread is positioned in the upper right. The overall arrangement suggests a variety of options for creating beaded jewelry.
