

Human Population Growth and Environment

Topic: Environment | Words: 863 Pages: 3

The population of the planet is still increasing, although the trend has slowed down compared to previous centuries. In many nations and regions where fertility changes quickly, demographic growth is a key factor in predicting future population increase. The future patterns in reproduction, death, and migration are unclear, however, there are also a number of additional factors that may have an impact on these trends, making future growth in population unpredictable. Nowadays, many policymakers, scientists, and organizations emphasize the detrimental effect of the growing human population on the environment, stressing the degradation of nature and its resources. As a result, with an increasing trend in the human population, there are negative impacts on the environment.

The growth of the human population has experienced various trends since human origin. According to genetic evidence, the global human population saw a significant decline to extremely low levels approximately 70,000 years ago (Bachi, 2017). After then, the demographic began to increase as a result of the growth of developed areas and agriculture. The population thereafter started to expand, surpassing 200 and 300 million by 1 AD, though there were regional demographic declines caused by starvation, warfare, and illness on a worldwide scale (Bachi, 2017). In 2000, there were almost 7.3 billion people inhabiting the planet, which was roughly eight times more than there had been 250 years before (Bachi, 2017). Thus, for almost a hundred thousand years, there has been an increasing trend in human population growth.
