History Of Philosophy Vol 2 Of 3:

History of Philosophy, Vol. 2 of 3 (Classic Reprint) Johann Eduard Erdmann, 2017-10-29 Excerpt from History of Philosophy Vol 2 of 3 In accordance with the character of the different epochs modern philosophy has to rise above the philosophical wisdom of the ancients and the theological wisdom of the middle Ages. No theories will meet the requirements of modern times nor deserve the name of philosophy except such as recognise both the here or real of antiquity and the hereafter or ideal of the Middle Ages and attempt to reconcile the two. Any system which left one of these sides out of account or which did not admit that there was a point where the two coincided would cease to be philosophical. And the difference between systems depends upon the different manner in which these two sides are conceived of as extension and thought as nature and spirit as real and rational and in a special degree upon the different methods of reconciling them. In the latter lies the main feature and therefore the real principle of any system of modern philosophy. In the period of transition from the Middle Ages there appeared side by side the philosophers who forgot God and the mystics who despised the world. They showed where the point was to be found from which both natural and supernatural knowledge are seen to be subordinate and partial aspects of a whole. For the Microcosmos of the former and the Microtheos or God in miniature of Boehme is man whose function is to introduce thoughts of God into the world to lead it to God. When philosophy becomes knowledge of man it does more than merely transcend the one-sidedness of knowledge of the Cosmos and of knowledge of God; it now for the first time corresponds to our idea of it. 2 and Henceforth the path that philosophy follows is not to reach self by starting from the world or from God but to start from self and find one's way back to a world and to God. History of Philosophy, Vol. 2 of 3 Johann Eduard Erdmann, 2015-06-02 Excerpt from History of Philosophy Vol 2 of 3 The part of the History of Philosophy of which the present volume treats I attempted to present in an extended work the first division of which appeared thirty-three years ago and was separated from the last division by a space of twenty years. I may be permitted to say something respecting the relation in which the present probably my last published work stands to that earlier which was my first. That it is a very different one part by part every one will readily understand who considers that the first division of the larger work was written when its author had reached his fourth climacteric year, the last division when he had reached the seventh and that now when he is approaching the ninth he must naturally find the first to be more remote and foreign than the last. Lectures on the History of Philosophy, Vol. 2 of 3 (Classic Reprint) Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel, 2018-03-10 Excerpt from Lectures on the History of Philosophy Vol 2 of 3 The development of philosophic science as science and further the progress from the Socratic point of View to the scientific begins with Plato and is completed by Aristotle They of all others deserve to be called teachers of the human race About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
