It is common to find network cards in a computer that do not connect to network cables correctly, or produce an error message when the cable is plugged in. This is often due to the fact that the network card is not properly installed or the cable is not properly connected. To troubleshoot this problem, first check the network card to make sure it is properly installed in the computer. Then check the network cable to make sure it is properly connected to the network card. If the problem persists, it may be necessary to replace the network card or the network cable.
