These effects appeared to be due to the length of time the person spent on the task. It appeared that 10 people in total were working on the computer at that time. I placed one person at the station. Another six others were there by the time the time was up.

It should be noted that the authors of the study did not consider the possibility that the observed relationship between the use of the Internet and the use of the telephone might be due to the fact that the use of the Internet is often associated with the use of the telephone. For example, the use of the Internet might be associated with the use of the telephone because the use of the Internet often involves the use of a computer, which is often used in conjunction with a telephone. The authors of the study did not consider this possibility, and therefore their findings may be biased.

22. The presence of the gag gene in HIV virus has been well established and it is generally believed that the gag gene encodes the structural proteins of the virus. However, the gag gene has been found to be involved in other functions as well, including provirus integration, regulation of provirus transcription, and modulation of the immune response. In this study, we have shown that the gag gene is involved in the regulation of the immune response in HIV-infected cells.
