Abstract: Staphylococcus aureus is a leading cause of nosocomial infection. The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of S. aureus in the nasal cavity of patients in a tertiary care hospital. A total of 100 patients were sampled, and 60% were found to be colonized with S. aureus. The majority of isolates were susceptible to all antibiotics tested, except methicillin and vancomycin. The results suggest that S. aureus colonization is common in the nasal cavity of patients in a tertiary care hospital.

Abstract – The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: the control group (10 children) and the training group (10 children). The training group participated in a 10-week training program that included aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the training program. The results of the study showed that the training program had a significant positive effect on the physical fitness of the children. The children in the training group showed significant improvements in their aerobic fitness, strength, and flexibility compared to the children in the control group. The findings of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.
