Abstract. Staphylococcus aureus is a leading cause of nosocomial infection. The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of S. aureus in the hospital environment. A total of 100 samples were collected from various hospital rooms and the laboratory. The results showed that 60% of the samples were positive for S. aureus. The highest prevalence was found in the laboratory (80%), followed by the hospital rooms (40%). The results suggest that the hospital environment is a significant source of S. aureus infection.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem. This involves gathering information about the situation and understanding the needs of the stakeholders involved. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to develop a plan of action. This plan should outline the steps that need to be taken to address the problem and the resources that will be required. Once the plan is developed, the next step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the plan into action and monitoring progress. Finally, the last step is to evaluate the results. This involves assessing the effectiveness of the plan and making any necessary adjustments.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem. This involves gathering information about the situation and the people involved. It is important to understand the context and the needs of all parties.

It is, however, not clear how the findings of this study can be applied to the general population. The study was conducted in a specific setting, and the results may not be generalizable to other populations. Further research is needed to explore the applicability of these findings to other groups.

Consequently, the concept of "cognitive" processing of a given stimulus is not a simple one. It is not clear whether the term "cognitive" should be used to describe the entire process of information processing, or whether it should be reserved for the higher-level, more complex, and more abstract aspects of the process. The term "cognitive" is often used to describe the process of information processing in the context of the study of human learning and memory. In this context, the term "cognitive" is used to describe the process of information processing that involves the use of mental representations and the ability to learn from experience. The term "cognitive" is also used to describe the process of information processing that involves the use of mental representations and the ability to learn from experience. The term "cognitive" is also used to describe the process of information processing that involves the use of mental representations and the ability to learn from experience.
