The Economic Theory of Product Differentiation John Beath, Yannis Katsoulacos, 1991-02-22 There are few industries in modern market economies that do not manufacture differentiated products This book provides a systematic explanation and analysis of the widespread prevalence of this important category of products The authors concentrate on models in which product selection is endogenous In the first four chapters they consider models that try to predict the level of product differentiation that would emerge in situations of market equilibrium These market equilibria with differentiated products are characterised and then compared with social welfare optima Particular attention is paid to the distinction between horizontal and vertical differentiation as well as to the related issues of product quality and durability This book brings together the most important theoretical contributions to these topics in a succinct and coherent manner One of its major strengths is the way in which it carefully sets out the basic intuition behind the formal results It will be useful to advanced undergraduate and graduate students taking courses in industrial economics and microeconomic theory

The Anti-Dumping Agreement and Developing Countries Aradhna Aggarwal, 2006-10-20 In the era of globalization trade policy has become a key development tool and expanding exports a major policy objective for developing countries However pressures for protectionism are threatening to reverse the gains The surge of anti dumping practices in the 1990s in many countries have triggered an intense debate on the anti dumping agreement and its implementation This volume analyses the importance of anti dumping from a developing country s perspective The author investigates the use of anti dumping in a comparative framework and reviews the genesis and evolution of the Agreement and its legal provisions She further discusses the economic and non economic justifications of anti dumping use and empirically analyses the macro economic factors motivating countries to use anti dumping Finally she examines the wide ranging proposals to reform the WTO anti dumping code The analysis brings out a bias against developing countries and stresses the need for fundamental reform of current anti dumping rules The author also reflects on plausible approaches to refine existing provisions and explores the possibility of reform by including a Public Interest Test She suggests updating the special and differential treatment provisions to remedy existing imbalances
