Malaria Control In Complex Emergencies Malaria Control In Complex Emergencies:

Malaria Control in Complex Emergencies World Health Organization, 2005 This handbook focuses on effective malaria control responses to complex emergencies particularly during the acute phase when reliance on international humanitarian assistance is greatest Topics covered initial assessment and planning surveillance outbreak preparedness and response case management prevention community participation and health education research and evaluation Malaria Control in Complex Emergencies , Child Health in Complex Emergencies Program on Forced Migration and Health, Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University, National Research Council, Committee on Population, Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration, Lulu Muhe, William M. Weiss, Anne Henderson Siegle, Dory Storms, Meenakshi Ramakrishnan, William J. Moss, 2005-12-08 Addressing the health needs of children in complex emergencies is critical to the success of relief efforts and requires coordinated and effective interventions However little systematic work has been undertaken to evaluate such care To address this need this monograph presents a review of the published literature in this area providing background on the burden of disease the major causes of morbidity and mortality and the evidence base for effective interventions It also describes surveys of nongovernmental organizations NGOs and international agencies providing care to children in complex emergencies which were conducted to identify guidelines commonly used to provide such care and assesses the content and limitations of these guidelines A more in depth survey of several organizations was also conducted to assess obstacles to this kind of care On the basis of the survey findings and the review of the published literature the working group recommended that evidence based locally adapted guidelines to address the curative and preventive care of children in complex emergencies and health systems planning should be adopted by ministries of health and supported by the World Health Organization WHO and UNICEF The guidelines should target as much as possible the different levels of health care workers providing care to children to ensure appropriate effective and uniform care in a variety of situations Child Health in Complex Emergencies presents specific examples of areas for further research and guideline development This report is not intended to be an exhaustive and definitive assessment of child health in complex emergencies The topic is much too vast and complex and different individuals and institutions will have incompatible perspectives Rather we aim to provide a starting point for discussion and debate on how to improve the care of children in these settings Malaria Control in Complex Emergencies ,2006 Vector control interventions designed to control malaria in complex humanitarian emergencies and in response to natural disasters ,2021-02-12 Preferred product characteristics PPCs are key tools to incentivize and guide the development of urgently needed health products Some of the vector control interventions deployed in complex emergencies and in response to natural disasters namely insecticide treated nets ITNs and indoor residual spraying IRS have already met identified public health needs in more stable settings other tools such as insecticide treated tarpaulins have been specifically designed for this use case Given the diverse mix of existing and potential new interventions and the considerable gaps in the associated evidence base this PPC aims to clearly articulate the unmet public health needs for tools designed to control malaria transmission in complex emergencies and in response to natural disasters Malaria Control During Mass Population Movements and Natural Disasters Program on Forced Migration and Health at the Mailman School of Public Health of Columbia University, National Research Council, Committee on Population, Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration, Holly A. Williams, Peter B. Bloland, 2003-01-16 Admittedly the world and the nature of forced migration have changed a great deal over the last two decades The relevance of data accumulated during that time period can now be called into question The roundtable and the Program on Forced Migration at the Mailman School of Public Health of Columbia University have commissioned a series of epidemiological reviews on priority public health problems for forced migrants that will update the state of knowledge Malaria Control During Mass Population Movements and Natural Disasters the first in the series provides a basic overview of the state of knowledge of epidemiology of malaria and public health interventions and practices for controlling the disease in situations involving forced migration and conflict Malaria Control in Humanitarian Emergencies World Health Organization, 2013 This second edition represents a thorough updating and revision of the first edition The structure remains similar but includes an additional chapter on humanitarian coordination All chapters have been revised to reflect changes in best practices improvements in technologies availability of new tools and changes in WHO recommendations The interagency handbook was developed to set out effective malaria control responses in humanitarian emergencies particularly during the acute phase when reliance on international humanitarian assistance is greatest It provides policy makers planners and field coordinators with practical advice on designing and implementing measures to reduce malaria morbidity and mortality in both man made and natural disasters Such measures must address the needs of all affected population groups and accommodate changing needs as an acute emergency evolves into either recovery or chronic emergency phase Ideal or gold standard approaches to malaria control are not always feasible in humanitarian emergencies Interventions must be adapted to the realities of each emergency Using this handbook should help humanitarian workers implement effective and concerted responses to malaria problems Malaria eradication World Health Organization, 2020-04-19 In 2016 at the request of the WHO Director General a group of scientists and public health experts from around the world were brought together to advise WHO on future scenarios for malaria including whether eradication was feasible Over three years the members of the Strategic Advisory Group on Malaria Eradication SAGme analysed trends and reviewed future projections for the factors and determinants that underpin malaria Our analysis and discussions reaffirmed that eradication will result in millions of lives saved and a return on investment of billions of dollars We did not identify biological or environmental barriers to malaria eradication In addition our review of models accounting for a variety of global trends in the human and biophysical environment over the next three decades suggests that the world of the future will have much less malaria to contend with However even with our most optimistic scenarios and projections we face an unavoidable fact using current tools we will still have 11 million cases of malaria in Africa in 2050 Under these circumstances it is impossible to set a target date for malaria eradication to formulate a reliable operational plan for malaria eradication or to give it a price tag Our current priority should be to establish the foundation for a successful future eradication effort At the same time we need to guard against the risk of failure as such failure might lead to the waste of huge sums of money frustrate all those involved national governments and malaria experts alike and cause a lack of confidence in the global health community s ability to rid the world of this disease We need a renewed drive towards research and development R D on vector control chemotherapy and vaccines in order to develop the transformative tools and knowledge base necessary for achieving eradication in the highest burden areas We need political leadership that makes effective and efficient use of increased domestic and international funding We need bespoke national and subnational strategies guided by improved use of data and stronger delivery systems to provide the appropriate mix of services to all those in need without financial hardship We need strengthened cross border regional and international cooperation on malaria control and elimination efforts worldwide When these critical foundations are laid we believe that the world will be in a much stronger position to make the final and credible push for eradication As we complete our work in 2019 we recognize that the world stands at a crossroads in the fight against malaria Despite huge progress in reducing malaria cases and deaths between 2000 and 2015 in the last five years we have witnessed the stalling of global progress The world is not on track to meet the 2020 milestones that will lead us to lower case incidence and mortality by 90% by 2030 from 2015 levels 5 Without massive concerted and coordinated action we are unlikely to meet these targets While we are certain that eradication by a specific date is not a promise we can make to the world just yet there is a clear agenda beginning with getting back on track to achieve the goals of the GTS that should immediately be pursued to make eradication possible

Coming to Grips with Malaria in the New Millennium Awash Teklehaimanot,2005 First Published in 2005 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company UN Millennium Development Library: Coming to Grips with Malaria in the New Millennium UN Millennium Project,2013-06-17 The Millennium Development Goals adopted at the UN Millennium Summit in 2000 are the world's targets for dramatically reducing extreme poverty in its many dimensions by 2015 income poverty hunger disease exclusion lack of infrastructure and shelter while promoting gender equality education health and environmental sustainability These bold goals can be met in all parts of the world if nations follow through on their commitments to work together to meet them Achieving the Millennium Development Goals offers the prospect of a more secure just and prosperous world for all The UN Millennium Project was commissioned by United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan to develop a practical plan of action to meet the Millennium Development Goals As an independent advisory body directed by Professor Jeffrey D Sachs the UN Millennium Project submitted its recommendations to the UN Secretary General in January 2005 The core of the UN Millennium Project's work has been carried out by 10 thematic Task Forces comprising more than 250 experts from around the world including scientists development practitioners parliamentarians policymakers and representatives from civil society UN agencies the World Bank the IMF and the private sector Coming to Grips with Malaria in the New Millennium presents an innovative strategic framework for relieving the burden that malaria imposes on society through the implementation of tried and tested anti malarial interventions designed to improve health nationally and to promote economic development locally Recommendations include early diagnosis treatment with effective anti malarial medicines the use of insecticide treated nets indoor residual spraying managing the environment improving housing extending health education and improving monitoring and evaluation systems Machel Study 10-year Strategic Review, 2009 The organisation of this report aims to heighten our understanding of the myriad ways in which armed conflict affects children and how children regard their participation not only in war but in programmes aimed at preventing violence against them and in promoting their recovery and reintegration The central message of this 10 year strategic review is that war violates every right of the child The report thus frames its findings within three categories political and diplomatic actions and responsibilities system wide international policies standards and architectures and prevention and response HL

Paper 143-II House of Lords Select Committee on Intergovernmental Organisations: Diseases Know No Frontiers: How Effective are Intergovernmental Organisations in Controlling Their Spread?, Volume II, Governing Disasters Shahla F. Ali, 2016-06-30 Drawing on international state and private sector case studies and a global survey this book examines local engagement in disaster relief The Contextual Determinants of Malaria Elizabeth A. Casman, Hadi Dowlatbadi, 2010-09-30 As malaria and other tropical diseases continue their resurgence questions about the potential impacts of environmental and demographic factors are becoming more critical Recent attempts to understand the increase in malaria incidence often acknowledge the importance of social economic and other contextual variables but fail to explicitly incorporate them into models or consider how they evolve in relation to one another This problem is of crucial interest to the climate policy community which has been buffeted by claims and counter claims concerning the impact of climate change on malaria This important volume examines the contextual determinants of malaria and attempts to develop methods for incorporating them into projections of future incidence Internationally renowned health specialists economists and other social scientists provide regional and global perspectives on risk modeling the history of eradication efforts current determinants including environmental social and economic factors and prospects for new vaccines and drugs The Contextual Determinants of Malaria argues that an association of climate change with increased malaria incidence will have at least as much to do with human aging poverty urbanization and population movement as with a rise in global temperatures By placing climate in this perspective The Contextual Determinants of Malaria focuses attention on the public health needs most critical in both the immediate and long term future It encourages multidisciplinary analysis of malaria control and improves our understanding of the interactions of the diverse range of factors involved in the incidence and spread of the disease

Examining the Role of Environmental Change on Emerging Infectious Diseases and Pandemics Bouzid, Maha, 2016-08-04 Climate change is one of the most widely debated and worrisome topics of our time As environmental changes become more prevalent there has been evidence to suggest that there is a correlation between the environment and a substantial increase of infectious diseases and viruses around the globe Examining the Role of Environmental Change on Emerging Infectious Diseases and Pandemics investigates the impact of climate change in relation to the emergence and spread of global diseases Highlighting epidemiological factors and policies to govern epidemics and pandemics this publication is a critical reference source for medical professionals students environmental scientists advocates policy makers academics and researchers

Supporting Local Health Care in a Chronic Crisis Program on Forced Migration and Health, Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University, National Research Council, Committee on Population, Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration, 2005-11-23 Providing medical support to the local population during a chronic crisis is difficult The crisis in the Democratic Republic of the Congo DRC which is characterized by high excess mortality ongoing armed violence mass forced displacement interference by neighboring countries resource exploitation asset stripping and the virtual absence of the state has led to great poverty and a dearth of funds for the support of the health system International nongovernmental organizations NGOs have stepped in to address the dire humanitarian situation This study looks at four organizations that support local health care in the eastern DRC the International Rescue Committee IRC Malteser Medical Emergency Relief International Merlin and the Association R gionale d Approvisionnement en M dicaments Essentiels ASRAMES The study makes a comparison of the management and financing approaches of these four organizations by collecting and comparing qualitative and quantitative data on their interaction with the remaining local health providers and the local population Specific objectives of the study are 1 To identify which management and financing approaches including the setting of fees are used by the four NGOs supporting healthcare in the eastern DRC 2 To determine how these financing approaches affect utilization rates in the health zones supported by the four NGOs 3 To assess how these utilization rates compare with donor and humanitarian standards 4 To determine at what level fees must be set to allow for cost recovery or cost sharing in health facilities 5 To identify the managerial problems confronting the four NGOs Many epidemiological and public health studies focus on the interaction between health providers and target groups Supporting Local Health Care in a Chronic Crisis Management and Financing Approaches in the Eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo concentrates more on how the relationship between the supporting NGOs and the local health system actually develops In addition a common aspect of many of the epidemiological and public health studies is the search for an optimal or at least appropriate management and financing approach SARS United States.
