Landscape John Wylie, 2007-08-07 Landscape is a stimulating introduction to and contemporary understanding of one of the most important concepts within human geography. A series of different influential readings of landscape are debated and explored and for the first time distinctive traditions of landscape writing are brought together and examined as a whole in a forward looking critical review of work by cultural geographers and others within the last twenty to thirty years. This book clearly and concisely explores landscape theories and writings allowing students of geography, environmental studies and cultural studies to fully comprehend this vast and complex topic. To aid the student vignettes are used to highlight key writers, papers and texts. Annotated further reading and student exercises are also included. the nonhuman in the humanities and social sciences has arguably been mobilized through a washing away of political violence its histories and its traces Reverberations aims to redress this problem by methodologically and conceptually placing political violence and nonhuman entities side by side The volume generates a new framework for the study of political violence and its protracted aftermath by attending through innovative ethnographic and historical studies to its distribution extension and endurance across time space materialities and otherworldly dimensions as well as its embodiment in subjectivities discourses and imaginations Collectively in the study of political violence the contributions focus on human agencies and experiences in engagement with nonhuman entities such as objects land fields houses buildings treasures trees spirits saints and prophets In a variety of contexts the scholars herein ask the crucial question What can be learned about political violence by analyzing it in the terrain of relationality between human beings and nonhuman entities How are things such as objects spaces natural phenomena or spiritual beings entwined in histories of political violence And vice versa how are histories of political violence implicated in nonhuman things Routledge Handbook of Landscape Character Assessment Graham Fairclough, Ingrid Sarlöv Herlin, Carys Swanwick, 2018-05-11 In this multi authored book senior practitioners and researchers offer an international overview of landscape character approaches for those working in research policy and practice relating to landscape Over the last three decades European practice in landscape has moved from a narrow if relatively straightforward focus on natural beauty or scenery to a much broader concept of landscape character constructed through human perception and transcending any of its individual elements Methods tools and techniques have been developed to give practical meaning to this idea of landscape character The two main methods Landscape Character Assessment LCA and Historic Landscape Characterisation HLC were applied first in the United Kingdom but other methods are in use elsewhere in Europe and beyond to achieve similar ends This book explores why different approaches exist the extent to which disciplinary or cultural specificities in different countries affect approaches to land management and landscape planning and highlights areas for reciprocal learning and knowledge transfer Contributors to the book focus on examples of European countries such as Sweden Turkey and Portugal that have adopted and extended UK style landscape characterisation but also on countries with their own distinctive approaches that have developed from different conceptual roots as in Germany France and the Netherlands The collection is completed by chapters looking at landscape approaches based on non European concepts of landscape in North America Australia and New Zealand This book has an introductory price of 125 205 which will last until 3 months after publication after this time it will revert to 140 225

Space, Place and Mental Health Sarah Curtis, 2016-04-01 There is a strong case today for a specific focus on mental public health and its relation to social and physical environments From a public health perspective we now appreciate the enormous significance of mental distress and illness as causes of disability and impairment Stress and anxiety and other mental illnesses are linked to risks in the environment This book questions how and why the social and physical environment matters for mental health and psychological wellbeing in human populations While putting forward a number of different points of view there is a particular emphasis on ideas and research from health geography which conceptualises space and place in ways that provide a distinctive focus on the interactions between people and their social and physical environment The book begins with an overview of a rich body of theory and research from sociology psychology social epidemiology social psychiatry and neuroscience considering arguments concerning mind body dualism and presenting a conceptual framework for studying how attributes of space and place are associated with human mental wellbeing It goes on to look in detail at how our mental health is associated with material or physical aspects of our environment such as natural and built landscapes with social environments involving social relationships in communities and with symbolic and imagined spaces representing the personal cultural and spiritual meanings of places These relationships are shown to be complex with potential to be beneficial or hazardous for mental health The final chapters of the book consider spaces of care and the implications of space and place for public mental health policy offering a broader view of how mental health might be improved at the population level With boxed case studies of specific research ideas and methods chapter summaries and suggestions for introductory reading this book offers a comprehensive introduction which will be valuable for students of health geography public health sociology and anthropology of health and illness It also provides an interdisciplinary review of the literature by the author and by other writers to frame a discussion of issues that challenge more advanced researchers in these fields

Waterways and the Cultural Landscape Francesco Vallerani, Francesco Visentin, 2017-09-11 Water control and management have been fundamental to the building of human civilisation In Europe the regulation of major rivers the digging of canals and the wetland reclamation schemes from the sixteenth to nineteenth centuries generated new typologies of waterscapes with significant implications for the people who resided within them This book explores the role of waterways as a form of heritage culture and sense of place and the potential of this to underpin the development of cultural tourism With a multidisciplinary approach across the social sciences and humanities chapters explore how the control and management of water flows are among some of the most significant human activities to transform the natural environment Based upon a wealth and breadth of European case studies the book uncovers the complex relationships we have with waterways the ways that they have been represented over recent centuries and the ways in which they continue to be redefined in different cultural contexts Contributions recognise not only valuable assets of hydrology that are at the core of landscape management but also more intangible aspects that matter to people such as their familiarity affecting what is understood as the fluvial sense of place This highly original collection will be of interest to those working in cultural tourism cultural geography heritage studies cultural history landscape studies and leisure studies curriculum that will engage children's interest, excite their imaginations and at the same time provide them with the knowledge, skills and understanding they need to live successfully in the 21st Century European Landscapes in Transition Teresa Pinto-Correia, Jørgen Primdahl, Bas Pedrolí, 2018-01-25 European rural landscapes as we experience them today are the result of ongoing processes and interactions between nature and society. These are changing fast; the future landscapes will be different from those we know currently. Written for academics, policy makers and practitioners, this book is the first to explore the complex histories of rural landscapes in Europe as a basis for their sound governance in future. Tensions between the needs of agricultural spaces driven by economic incentives and a variety of non-agricultural functions are explored to demonstrate current challenges and the shortfalls in the policies that address them. Using inspiring case studies that highlight the roles of regional agents and communities, the authors go further than the usual analyses to illustrate the importance of local context. Written by experts currently working to revitalise the rural landscapes of Europe, the text concludes with suggestions for improving landscape policy and planning practice Integrating Research on Faculty, 1996
