McDermott, Peter Burke, 2015-10-01 This volume provides the first comparative survey of the relations between the two most active book worlds in Eurasia between 1450 and 1850 Prominent scholars in book history explore different approaches to publishing printing and book culture They discuss the extent of technology transfer and book distribution between the two regions and show how much book historians of East Asia and Europe can learn from one another by raising new questions exploring remarkable similarities and differences in these regions production distribution and consumption of books The chapters in turn show different ways of writing transnational comparative history Whereas recent problems confronting research on European books can instruct researchers on East Asian book production so can the privileged role of noncommercial publications in the East Asian textual record highlight for historians of the European book the singular contribution of commercial printing and market demands to the making of the European printed record Likewise although production growth was accompanied in both regions by a wider distribution of books woodblock technology's simplicity and mobility allowed for a shift in China of its production and distribution sites farther down the hierarchy of urban sites than was common in Europe And the different demands and consumption practices within these two regions expanding markets led to different genre preferences and uses as well as to the growth of distinctive female readerships A substantial introduction pulls the work together and the volume ends with an essay that considers how these historical developments shape the present book worlds of Eurasia This splendid volume offers expert new insight into the ways of producing financing distributing and reading printed books in early modern Europe and East Asia This is comparative history at its best which leaves us with a better understanding of each context and of the challenges common to book cultures across space and time Ann Blair author of Too Much to Know Managing Scholarly Information before the Modern Age and professor of history Harvard University This engrossing account of the history of the book by leading specialists on the European and East Asian publishing worlds takes stock of what we know and how much we still need to know about the places that books had in the lives of our early modern forebears Each chapter is masterful state of the field coverage of its subject and together they set a new standard for future studies of the book East and West Timothy Brook author of The Troubled Empire China in the Yuan and Ming Dynasties
