

MACROECONOMICS

SPARKCHARTS

Macroeconomics is the study of the economy as a whole. It focuses on the behavior of aggregate variables such as GDP, inflation, and unemployment. The primary goal of macroeconomics is to understand the causes and consequences of economic fluctuations and to develop policies to promote stable growth and full employment.

The aggregate demand curve shows the total demand for goods and services in an economy. It is derived from the individual demand curves of all households and firms. The aggregate demand curve is downward-sloping, reflecting the fact that as the price level falls, the quantity of goods and services demanded increases.

The Phillips Curve shows the relationship between inflation and unemployment. It is an upward-sloping curve, indicating that as unemployment decreases, inflation tends to increase. This relationship is based on the idea that lower unemployment leads to higher wages, which in turn leads to higher prices.

The IS-LM model is a macroeconomic model that combines the IS curve (representing the relationship between interest rates and output) and the LM curve (representing the relationship between interest rates and money supply). The IS-LM model is used to analyze the effects of monetary and fiscal policy on the economy.
