This book examines the effect of economic power on a state's strategic autonomy Strategic autonomy is a fundamental condition for the availability of strategic options in the interaction of states This book provides the first clear operational definition of the concept and offers an analysis of the relevance of the national economy to strategic autonomy The main sources of economic power size of the economy position in trade and technological networks savings wealth and finance and their impact on strategic autonomy are analyzed in depth The strategic governance of the national economy is also addressed as a way of ensuring that national economic power can work as strategic power for a country providing it with strategic autonomy The strategies pursued by China which in under four decades has gone from an underdeveloped state to the main challenger of the dominant world power and Germany which despite being defeated in World War II having no nuclear weapons and having chosen to be a civilian power became the dominant power in Europe are analyzed in depth as two paradigmatic examples of the theory developed by the book This book will be of much interest to students of strategic studies economics foreign policy and International Relations Cultural Studies of Rights John Nguyet Erni, 2014-06-11 At a time of global uncertainties and erosion of liberties how will cultural studies clear a space for a parallel intellectual and political engagement with human rights practice How will human rights thinking be liberated from its doctrinal approach to ethics and legal justice This book forges an alliance between cultural studies and human rights scholarships to help us better understand the changing and complex political context that continuously shapes contemporary violence To date interdisciplinary dialogue or institutional collaboration remains rare across the two domains resulting in critical interpretive work appearing too vacuous at times and institutional legal work often trapped in doctrinalism By opening a door for a new and engaging scholarship this book will re ignite debates and passions within communication and critical cultural studies in the search for global justice This book was originally published as a special issue of Communication and Critical Cultural Studies

McLain,2018-07-03 In this selection of short stories the Swiss author Dill McLain tries to convey to us how sometimes in most critical moments we should never stop struggling but cling to a hope. Through her simple direct and humorous lyrics when a great love tells us goodbye when crises and problems of everyday life overwhelm us when things seem absolutely lost suddenly life can take a turn showing us that maybe around the next corner a better future or real love might be waiting for us. These are fictional stories inspired by observations and experiences of long journeys in Spain and Portugal. At midnight in Adra the short story that gives the title to the book tells us the story of Amely a young Frenchwoman traveling with her fiancé to whom she has been engaged for six years along the Andalusian coast. On the way to Malaga they are stopped by the police and arrested after discovering a considerable amount of drugs hidden away in the car. She had no idea of the secret life of her fiancé as drug trafficker and is released by the police to find herself lost and desperate in an unknown town on the Andalusian coast. That night she sleeps on the beach. On the following day she is woken up by a small doggie who in some way is responsible for the coming big change in her life. The author offers us entertaining stories which invite us to never give up not to lose faith and to always trust that tomorrow can undoubtedly be better.
